BUT SHALLOW WATER SITE URGED BY COURT

Florida Fails to Halt Nerve Gas Dumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal district judge refused today to forbid the sea-bottom burial of deadly nerve gas off the Florida coast.

But Judge June L. Green coupled her denial of a temporary restraining order with an "urgent request" that the United States defence department designate a different site for the dumping.

She said she had "serious misgivings" about the selected site. Sinking of a ship carrying the gas at a depth of 16,000 feet, she said, posed the danger of a sudden and simultaneous crushing of all of the concrete-encased gas containers.

Judge Green also noted testimony and affidavits submitted to her that this is the first time the U.S. Army had planned to dispose of gas at such a great depth.

She also noted that two years ago the army disposed of gas in 7,000 feet of water off the New Jersey coast and that later checks by navy scientists had revealed no detectable harm to marine life or anything.

The judge's action came on a complaint by the Environmental Defence Fund, a New York-based citizens' group, and joined by Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida.

WEATHER A PROBLEM

The weather, meanwhile, posed a further challenge to the army's plans to dump the 2,675 tons of gas in the Atlantic off Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The weather bureau in Miami reported a dangerous tropical depression with winds of 60 miles an hour approaching the Bahamas and Florida.

Although there were no present forecasts of a possible hurricane in the area, Dr. Robert H. Simpson, head of the National Hurricane Centre in Miami, said it was possible a hurricane "could come with great suddenness."

Lawyers for the fund said they would appeal Judge Green's decision immediately to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

There was no immediate indication, moreover, about the reaction of the defence department and the army to the judge's request that they seek another disposal site "at a reasonable distance" from Sunny Point, N.C., the port of embarkation.

PLANS CONTINUE

At Sunny Point, where the loading of the 418 steel- and concrete-encased nerve gas rockets was proceeding, navy Capt. A. G. Hamilton, commander of the sea phase of the operation, said he was watching the tropical depression carefully and would not move out of port if it became a threat to the burial area.

Hamilton said the tugs would not begin pulling the ship to sea until they had a 96-hour forecast of good weather. He said the operation would remain in port until such a forecast was made.

If the weather is favorable, Hamilton said he hopes to get the operation under way late Saturday. However, the loading of the caskets was running slightly behind schedule and might not be completed until Sunday, he said.

NO DANGER, SAYS U.K.

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain announced today that American plans to dump nerve gas off the Florida coast will cause no appreciable harmful effect aside from localized damage to marine life.

The foreign office released the conclusions of a report of a team of British experts which discussed the dumping problem with U.S. officials

COMMON ENERGY POLICY URGED

MONTREAL — Canada and the United States should form a common policy on continental energy resources, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel told a Montreal news conference here Thursday.

He was commenting on Canadian guidelines for oil development in the north announced in Ottawa Thursday. See story on Page 2.

CANADA POLICY

Oil Imports Face Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene announced today new regulations requiring importers of motor gasoline for use anywhere in Canada to get licences from the national energy board — a step to reinforce the government's national oil policy.

The announcement follows months of controversy over the market effects of cheaper imported oil and gasoline on the Alberta-produced oil refined in Eastern Canada by the major oil companies.

NOW IN EFFECT

Under the new regulations which went into effect Thursday, the national energy board will have to judge whether certain applications to import motor gasoline are consistent with the development of Canada's own oil resources.

On May 7, the national energy board imposed a ban on sales of imported gasoline west of the Ottawa Valley but this ban was ruled unconstitutional by the Exchequer Court earlier this month.

The court decision allowed Cal Oil Inc. of Montreal to import gasoline, apparently from Spain.

Greene today said the objectives of the national oil policy are still valid. The government was trying a new approach.

ALSO VENEZUELA

The board is also trying to stop the flow of Montreal-refined gasoline from Venezuela west of the Ottawa Valley dividing line.

The Exchequer Court decision by Mr. Justice W. R. Jackett, the court's president, did not affect the voluntary arrangement keeping gasoline and other products refined in Montreal from Venezuelan imported crude out of the region west of the Ottawa area.

That agreement was made in 1961 at the time the national oil policy was announced. However, there is some movement of gasoline into Eastern Ontario.

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and other companies have said they are reducing production at Ontario refineries using Alberta crude because of stiffer competition from lower-price and Montreal-refined gasoline.

NDP SEES RESOURCES 'SELL-OUT'

OTTAWA (CP) — T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, accused Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin today of trying to intimidate the national energy board into approving a huge export of natural gas to the United States.

He said at a news conference the federal government is preparing a further sell-out of Canadian energy resources to the U.S.

He said Pepin has stated publicly the energy board ought to approve the export of $3 billion worth of natural gas to the U.S.

Schools Squeeze To Continue

QUESNEL (CP) — Education Minister Donald Brothers said Thursday the provincial government will continue for another year to restrict school construction to essentials.

"Money markets are still as tight as ever, if not tighter," he said. "Interest rates have not come down."

He said he has given this message to school board officials: "We don't want palaces built. We want functional schools — not cheap schools, but effective, efficient, well-built schools."

He also said he is trying to persuade school boards to look at the idea of consolidating school districts to reduce staff.

"We are being overgoverned in B.C. We have too many officials, too many secretary-treasurers, too many superintendents."

Th' carpenters saw an opportunity t' hammer out an agreement, but nobody really got nailed.

IT'S ONLY A PAPER WAR but up until the Manitoba legislature was prorogued Thursday after the longest session in its history, these two combatants, NDP labor minister A. R. Paulley (left) and Gil Molgat, former provincial Liberal leader, fought it out in earnest in political debates. Paper fight is traditional after the end of the legislative session. ANTI-INFLATIONARY policies by Ottawa are paying off, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Thursday, in hailing the unusually slow rate of increase in the consumer price index. The index rose by one-half of one per cent in July from June. For details see Page 10.

Measles Fight Gets $25,000

The Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. announced today it is donating $25,000 to a province-wide attack on German measles.

It's the latest development in a wave of support from a variety of sources which will stretch the provincial government's limited innoculation program.

Foundation secretary Allen Cowen of Vancouver announced the contribution at a press conference in Saanich municipal hall this morning.

He said he hopes the Kinsmen move will spur other foundations to boost the campaign the provincial government has launched on a budget of $88,000.

COUNCILS DONATE

Victoria and Saanich councils have decided to contribute $5,000 each, enough to supply vaccine for the preschoolers in each municipality. Central and North Saanich councils are participating and Esquimalt and Oak Bay councils are expected to consider the subject at their meetings.

The province's campaign will be aimed at elementary school children on a priority basis.

The campaign, and the push for funds, stems from two developments. For the first time there is a vaccine which appears to deliver long-term immunity from German measles or rubella.

And there has been an outbreak of the disease this spring with more anticipated this fall and winter. It is characteristically less prevalent in the summer.

Cyclamates Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — The sale of all foods containing cyclamates will be banned by Sept. 1, the health department said today.

Mid-East Ceasefire Deteriorates As Israeli Jets Pound Jordan

JERUSALEM (CP)—Israeli air force planes struck at Jordanian army positions today, the military command said, in further deterioration of the Middle East ceasefire.

The command said the raid was launched against Jordanian army strongholds which have given assistance to Palestinian guerrillas in attacks against Israeli frontier settlements.

A spokesman had announced earlier that Israeli air force jets crossed the border today and bombed and strafed Arab guerrilla targets inside Jordan for the second straight day.

The Tel Aviv spokesman said those raids were in response to mortar attacks on two Jewish settlements.

The planes all returned safely after hitting objectives adjacent to Israel's Beisan Valley, he said. Beisan Valley settlements of Maoz Haim and Yardena came under mortar fire Thursday night, but no damage was reported.

This was the second Israeli air strike inside Jordan since the Middle East ceasefire went into effect a week ago. The guerrilla organizations have disowned the truce initiated by the United States as a preliminary to peace talks.

Carpenters Sign Pact

Crucial Break In Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 9,000-member carpenters union and the Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for 600 British Columbia building contractors, today announced signing of a new two-year contract.

A joint statement by the union and the CLRA said the agreement adopted proposals made two weeks ago by deputy labor minister William Sands, who acted as mediator.

The new contract, running to March 31, 1972, provides an increase of $1.38 an hour in wages and fringe benefits, spread over the two years.

WORK HALTED

The agreement already approved by secret ballot of union members and CLRA member-organizations — is seen as crucial in the B.C. dispute, which saw work almost completely stopped through the province for three months.

The former base rate for carpenters — including fringes —was $5.03 an hour. This increases to $6.41 in the final stage of the two-year agreement.

The carpenters will get an immediate increase of 45 cents, retroactive to June 1. Additional increases during the contract will be 37 cents Oct. 1, 36 cents April 1, 1971, and 20 cents Oct. 1, 1971.

The carpenters union was the largest of 10 locked out by the contractors' association last spring. A total of 25,000 construction workers were locked out or on strike during the three-month stoppage that ended July 27.

INTERVENTION

Work was resumed after the provincial government invoked compulsory arbitration sections of the B.C. Mediation Commission Act.

Most of the unions indicated they would not return, but after personal intervention by Premier Bennett and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, the two sides agreed to go back to work and submit their disputes to mediation by Deputy Labor Minister Sands.

Since then, six unions have voted to reject Sands's proposals for settlement.

ANTI-POLLUTION DRIVE THREATENS US

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Council of the Forest Industries of British Columbia said Thursday the future of the industry would be threatened by the enforcement of strict anti-pollution measures.

A brief, presented by council president Gordon Draeseke to a public hearing of the pollution control branch, said any control measures adopted by the provincial government must be feasible for the forest industry to implement.

The brief said that standards of pollution control should be set for each individual forest operation instead of for the industry generally.

Pulp Workers Call Walkout

A strike that would close down eight more B.C. pulp mills has been set for midnight Wednesday.

Pat O'Neal, spokesman for the Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, said in Prince George the strike would begin when the term of provincial mediator Gus Leonidas expires.

Involved are 5,700 members of the Brotherhood and more than 1,200 members of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers union.

The men are employed at MacMillan Bloedel plants at Powell River and Port Alberni; Crown Zellerbach mills at Elk Falls and Ocean Falls; Rayonier mills at Port Alice and Port Mellon on Howe Sound; Northwood Pulp in Prince George; and Kamloops Pulp and Paper.

Eight other pulp mills have been shut down since July 24 as a result of a strike by 4,200 members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. The mills are at Crofton, Harmac, Gold River, Woodfibre, Prince George (2), Castlegar and Skookumchuk.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson has reminded construction workers that any walkouts they may have in mind would be illegal.

. . . PULP STRIKE

Peterson, in Houston, B.C., Thursday to open what is expected to become the world's largest sawmill, said binding arbitration sections of Bill 33 would be invoked if building trades unions took strike action.

Local 170 of the Plumbers' Union served 72-hour strike notice on three lower mainland contractors Wednesday, although the union said it had no immediate plans to strike.

Bill 33 empowers the government to order a return to work when the public interest is threatened, with violations punishable by fines of up to $1,000 to individuals and $10,000 to employers or unions.

The Bulkley Valley mill opened by Peterson cost $25 million, and is expected to reach its top production capacity of 270 million board feet in 18 months.

In the forest industry Thursday the International Woodworkers of America and MacMillan Bloedel jointly announced a study aimed at promoting better labor relations to avoid wildcat strikes and other shutdown tactics.

The study was announced by IWA regional president Jack Moore and MacMillan Bloedel vice-president Robert Bonner.

NEGOTIATIONS

It will get under way as soon as current contract negotiations allow parties to draw up an agenda.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Appeals Court is currently working on a report that will contain recommendations for settlement of the dispute between 27,000 members of the coast IWA and 116 employers.

The union has served strike notice on companies, and the companies in turn have served lockout notice, with both sides waiting for the Nemetz proposals.

WILL STRIKE

Meanwhile, some 270 lumber inspectors, members of the IWA, have said they will strike at 8 a.m. Monday if a dispute involving use of a new automated planer at Port Alberni isn't cleared up.

The matter is considered of such importance that IWA president Ronald Roley of Portland, Ore. has been called to Vancouver to help resolve the question, which is whether lumber inspectors or others have jurisdiction over the machine.

Ottawa 'Ignoring' B.C. Cities

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell today criticized the federal government for weighting its urban aid in favor of provinces which already benefit from other equalization programs.

Campbell's remarks were made at a press conference prior to leaving for Winnipeg, where he will attend a conference of provincial ministers of municipal affairs and their deputies.

Campbell said federal Liberal MPs are failing to put forward the case for B.C. cities which are as much in need of federal help in solving urban problems as are the cities of Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

He said it is "a little thick" that Ottawa should disperse income tax collections from B.C. to help poorer areas and then fail to give B.C. a fair share of other separate spending programs.

Federal cabinet ministers from B.C. should "just for once" put forward the B.C. view, Campbell said, adding: "The rest of the mice down there who aren't cabinet ministers, you can't even hear them squeak."

Postal Talks End in Failure

OTTAWA (CP) — The week's rally in bargaining between the federal treasury board and the Council of Postal Unions fell short of a settlement in negotiations today.

While spokesmen for both sides denied negotiations are once more in deadlock, each indicated it was up to the other side to make the next move. No time was fixed for another meeting.

ISHERWOOD'S TREE SAVED, PARTIALLY

Saanich Ald. Foster Isherwood's tree on Dallas Road will be saved — at least some of it.

City council heard a report from the parks department Thursday that everything above 15 feet should go. But it was up to council to do this or remove the tree entirely. The parks department had said earlier the tree is in a dangerous condition.

It was agreed that the tree, at 104 Dallas Road, "be put in a safe condition."

Earlier, Isherwood, a Victoria lawyer, said in an interview he believed a portion of the tree could remain.

Brazilian Next

MONTEVIDEO (AP) — The Uruguayan government studied today an unauthenticated message found in a Buenos Aires cafe which indicated the Tupamaro guerrillas might murder the Brazilian diplomat they kidnapped. The message made no mention of American agronomist Claude L. Fly, who was kidnapped last Friday.

Officials in Montevideo could not confirm the authenticity of the note found in the Argentine capital 150 miles up the Plate estuary. But it contained language similar to that used in 10 previous messages from the urban Tupamaros, and it was delivered in the same manner —left in the restroom of a cafe.

The communique said Dan Mitrione, the kidnapped American police adviser whose body was found Monday, had been sentenced to death for "collaborating with the forces of repression."

It said the process of "revolutionary justice" for Brazilian Consul Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide, 41, could be halted if the Uruguayan government released about 150 prisoners demanded as ransom for the Tupamaros.

An earlier message, relayed to authorities Tuesday, said Dias Gomide and Fly, a 65-year-old consultant working for the agriculture ministry, both were in good health and had not been sentenced yet.

THE WEATHER

Sunny days are here to stay, for the weekend at any rate.

According to the weather office at Victoria International Airport a ridge of high pressure over lower B.C. will bring sunny weather and warm temperatures to Victoria Saturday and Sunday.

The high for the weekend will be in the low 70s and winds will be generally light. Westerly winds of 15 to 20 miles per hour are forecast for the Strait of Juan de Fuca Saturday afternoon.

Hickel Pushes Pact on Energy

Times News Services

MONTREAL — U.S. Interior Secretary walter Hickel believes Canada and the United States should form common policy on continental energy resources.

Hickel, who left today for a tour of the Canadain Arctic accompanied by Canadian Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, told a news conference here Thursday that any such agreement would "only be good if it's good for both countries."

"I look forward to a North America energy policy that will take in all forms of energy — atomic, coal, gas, water or whatever," he told newsmen.

However, he said he considered oil imports an entirely different matter, "based on other criteria," and conceded that the U.S. doesn't produce enough oil for the American domestic market.

GUIDELINES

In Ottawa Thursday, Chretien and Industry Minister J. J. Greene announced guidelines for future construction of oil and gas pipelines in the North, governing pollution control, Canadian ownership, and employment of northern residents.

A joint news conference was told major gas and oil companies have expressed an interest in constructing pipelines but that only one trunk line each for oil and gas in the North would be permitted.

A "corridor" for the initial pipelines would be established at a future date.

In a formal statement, the ministers said the guides will apply to all pipelines tapping oil and gas resources north of the 60th degree of latitude in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and in Alaska.

- The energy and northern development ministers will act as a "point of contact" between industry and government to guide prospective applicants wishing to build pipelines.
- Only one trunk oil pipeline and one trunk gas pipeline will be allowed in the North within a designated "corridor."
- Each of these lines will provide "common carrier" service at published tariffs or a "contract carrier service" at a negotiated price;
- Northern pipelines, like those in all other areas of the country, will be under the jurisdiction of the federal government.
- Means of providing Canadians with a "substantial opportunity" for participating in the financing, engineering, construction, ownership and management of the pipelines will play an important part in the government's consideration of applications.
- The National Energy Board will ensure that any applicant gives satisfactory assurances that pollution will be prevented and that the rights of northern residents and freedom of navigation will be preserved.
- Applicants must provide specific programs for employment of residents of the North both during construction and operation.

BENNETT POLE 'UNFUNNY' SAYS INDIAN

A carving of Premier W. A. C. Bennett atop a totem pole at Hazelton is "sacirilege." the administrator of the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs said Thursday.

Bill Wilson said he was in Hazelton Wednesday when the totem pole was raised during a visit there by the provincial cabinet.

The carving, atop a column of traditional Indian figures, shows Bennett in a top hat, bow tie and frock coat.

"If it's a joke, it's a terribly unfunny joke," said Wilson, a former University of Victoria student who will be studying law at the University of B.C. this fall.

City Agrees To Gorge Work

Victoria city council agreed Thursday to start the ball rolling on a joint approach to improving Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterway.

Council will advise Saanich it favors a joint meeting between Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt to consider the future of the area, and to implement plans if they are found favorable.

"The beautification of the Gorge is something to behold," said Ald. Peter Pollen.

But on a rising tide, the "filth and sewage" from the Inner Harbor forms a "major health problem," he said. The city should study this.

Ald. Harold Olafson pointed out that under the five-year capital budget, authorization is contained to borrow money to eliminate discharge of raw sewage into the Inner Harbor by connecting it to pipes leading to marine outfalls.

In other business, council:

- Expressed "deep concern" that the attorneys-general of Canada and B.C. were not represented at the hearings into the planned ending of passenger railway service between Courtenay and Victoria in view of legal obligations in the past involving land grants;
- Asked the engineer to repair the closed toilets at the Imperial Oil service station on the Causeway and negotiate with the company over the costs;
- Supported Saanich and Esquimalt councils in pressing for a federal study on enlarging the drydock to handle major ships now being built;
- Placed itself on record as supporting any effort Saanich Peninsula municipalities take to maintain bus service by Vancouver Island Coach Lines, which has applied to the Public Utilities Commission to discontinue service to Cordova Bay, West Saanich, Sidney and Deep Cove.

Lumber Firm Upset Over Strike Threat

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. has told its 1,000 Victoria employees it is "incomprehensible" they should strike over certain unresolved items in a new agreement.

A message given to employees today says Victoria IWA local president Murray Drew had suggested BCFP's Point Ellice and Victoria plywood mills and Victoria sawmill could be struck by midnight Sunday.

The local union and the company have been negotiating contract matters which have not been included in the coast master agreement.

By Thursday, the company message said, of the original 24 items, four remained unresolved.

"Mr. Drew . . . stated that he was not sure he could recommend settlement on the basis of the moves made by the company," said the BCFP notice.

Drew has suggested that the mills may be struck by midnight Sunday.

Payments to Local Doctors Released by Medical Board

The British Columbia Medical Services Commission recently published its financial statement for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1970.

It showed that the provincial medicare plan paid out $113 million to doctors, clinics, hospitals and similar groups. It took in $123 million and, after expenses, had about $3 million left.

★ ★ ★

Following is a list of gross payments made for the cost of insured services to Victoria area doctors listed in the yellow pages of the 1969 telephone directory.

These gross amounts, in excess of $500, are listed alphabetically by person, group, or private clinic to which payment was made and in many instances payment includes services rendered by a number of practitioners, indicated by a figure in parenthesis.

It is emphasized that no indication is given of amount of overhead doctors must pay or hours worked.

In some cases doctors listed in the directory did not appear in the financial statements and their names are not included. Also excluded are the names of doctors which did not conform with names and initials in the statement.

Fish Lines Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — An unexpected delay has occurred in the drawing of fisheries closing lines that would bar foreign fishing fleets from large bodies of water on Canada's East and West coasts.

Observers here are puzzled over why the cabinet has not acted to establish the lines, authorized by Parliament in June before it recessed for the summer.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis told the Commons external affairs committee in May that the government could issue maps setting out the closing lines within days after the enabling legislation was passed.

Davis is known to attach great importance to the lines, which would be drawn between co-ordinates on either side of the entrances to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the Bay of Fundy and Queen Charlotte Sound.

The question was on the agenda for the final week of intensive sessions the cabinet held throughout July, and aides of the minister appeared optimistic then that it would be disposed of without undue complications.

A knowledgeable source suggested that Davis apparently was unable to persuade his cabinet colleagues to view the matter with urgency.

He also thought it possible that other cabinet members had expressed concern about the implications of drawing the lines.

Another source suggested the closing lines may have fallen victim temporarily to the need of a "digestion period" after passage of the controversial legislation to enact a 100-mile-wide pollution control zone around the Arctic archipelago.

Arrangements for Arctic pollution control are a more pressing issue at the moment, he maintained.

Awakening to Danger

A COMBINATION OF INescapable facts is giving daily impetus to the public demand for protection of our environment. No longer is a smoggy day or a polluted stream viewed as an exception to a general rule that the great outdoors cannot really be harmed; it is, on the contrary, seen as one more step toward an inevitable disaster that can be avoided only by widespread and determined efforts to curb the poisoning of our air, land and waters.

The recent smog conditions in eastern sections of this continent and with even greater severity in Tokyo; the Quebec Water Board Report which this week revealed that there is only one relatively clean river left in that province; the growing evidence on every hand that smoke, garbage, sewage, refuse, wastes, litter and other causes of environmental destruction are getting out of control — all these developments are lending urgent strength to public protests and demands for governmental action.

And governments are gradually realizing that current anti-pollution drives are not mere fads but urgent life-saving defences created by people who recognize the dangerous trend and are convinced that something must be done to halt it.

In the United States last week some authorities took emergency steps to combat intolerable conditions. New York's Mayor Lindsay, faced with a mounting toll of smog victims and public demands for action, reduced garbage burning by 20 per cent and cut down on incinerators in city-owned buildings. There was talk of prohibiting automobiles in the central blocks of the city—in New York as in Victoria—but these were short-term remedies.

In Vancouver there was heartening evidence that the federal government, through its fisheries department, plans to take a hard line with pulp and paper plants which produce an unacceptable degree of pollution in rivers and lakes as well as the coastal sea. There were even threats, in a brief presented to the Vancouver sitting of the B.C. Pollution Control Branch, that the federal fisheries department would close pulp and paper mills if they offend. Said the brief: "It will be more difficult for violations of the spirit and letter of the act to remain undiscovered." It added that "some conventional pulp mills may be forced to close down."

There can be no doubt that an aroused public, and the inescapable facts of our deteriorating environment, are making themselves felt in government circles, and that the new view of pollution will result in further restrictive legislation. It is only just in time. For even though some legislative effects are beginning to be seen, pollution of our water and air is still going full blast in many places. We are far from having turned the corner toward a more livable world. And many governments are still dragging their feet into the new era of action against despoilers of our habitable globe.

A brief presented in Vancouver by the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control put the case clearly: "It is possible a good deal of our idea of industrial progress will turn out to have been a foolish, short-sighted view, well suited only to the exhaustion of our forest resource with maximum speed at minimum cost."

Up to His Ankles, But Too Deep

PROFESSOR ARLEIGH H. LAYcock of Edmonton, speaking in Toronto, has waded only ankle-deep into the subject of Canadian water export to the United States, but has gone too far even at that depth.

He notes that most Canadians oppose such export "despite our having done extremely little research on the subject." That in itself is sufficient grounds for opposing the idea. Canada should stay clear of export proposals until such time as we know what we have, what we need and what the eventual results of export could be.

Professor Laycock rightly sees that it would be the United States that would gain through any export of Canadian water. Canada would lose the water, the valleys that would be flooded as reservoirs, and sovereignty if a supra-national authority were established to administer the water export. With these admissions, Professor Laycock suggests that some schemes "would serve Canadian as well as export needs." They would be gains with a heavy price.

Diversions are far-reaching in their effects, on water bodies, on the water table, and on the environment. Alberta authorities, for instance, are already concerned about the effects of damming operations in British Columbia.

The Alberta university professor said all that needs saying in his earlier comment that Canadians are against export of water to the U.S. in spite of limited Canadian research on the subject. Certainly no suggestion of export should be taken seriously until full research has been completed, and probably not even then.

Something Or Nothing Of Value

PERHAPS IT IS NOT FAIR TO ask how critics can describe a new film playing in Victoria as "a cherished classic" and "an appealing movie" while the provincial censor says the same entertainment contains "nudity, sex and brutal violence." There is no dichotomy in these statements. One person's poison is another's passion. If anything, the conflicting remarks are an illustration of society's changing values on the one hand, and its traditionally cautious approach to social change on the other.

The fact that society condones nudity and sex, yet feels it should warn people against it, shows that our values are in some kind of flux. Shedding all the value judgments connected with sex and nudity, what Canadians are faced with in varying degrees today is this: formerly very private manifestations of human behavior are being displayed in public. Sex and nudity in themselves are not judged to be good or bad. Any expression of sex or violence is assessed on whether it shows "redeeming social value"; thus the line between pornography and art is almost indefinable for legal purposes.

The implications of the new permissiveness in films, books, magazines and plays is a subject of much debate in the Western world. Since Denmark abolished all censorship, pornography has proliferated but sex crime rates have declined. In the United States the draft report of the President's Commission on Pornography says, "Research indicates that erotic materials do not contribute to the development of character deficits, nor operate as a significant factor in anti-social behavior or in crime and deliquency causation."

More important than any study results are the reactions of society as a whole to erotica and pornography. And the line-ups at local movie houses featuring restricted films, coupled with brisk "girlie" magazine sales, indicate broad acceptance of the new permissiveness. Evolving attitudes to sexual matters may in themselves be trivial, but the speed of the change, considering our Puritan forefathers, is symptomatic of more basic and subtle shifts in the mores of North America.

A New Labor Relations Code Coming

Humphreys

NOBODY wants a strike, least of all one crippling to the national economy. But if one is as inevitable as the two-week British national dock strike appeared to be, then from many points of view it could not have come at a better time. For the timing the government can thank the national docks secretary, Tim O'Leary, who contracted pneumonia earlier in the year, forcing the showdown to be moved back from February or March, when it would have been Harold Wilson's headache. One man's pneumonia is another man's headache.

Now that the strike has been settled, or as close to settled as can be expected in some chronically unhappy docklands, confidence and satisfaction have mixed with the relief coming out of government, union and employer offices.

It was serious but not disastrous. Shipowners lost $12 million in profits. The dockers lost $10 million in wages and the unions another $1,200,000. Trade valued at about $1,250 million has been held up. Some exports have been lost permanently. Business has gone over to continental ports with more stable labor relations.

Economy Dented

Conditions prevailing before the strike will not be restored for some time; and nobody is denying that the economy has been dented. Still, few strikes have ended with such mutual respect and goodwill on all sides, again not counting the chronically militant minorities faced with particularly difficult local situations.

Two weeks was long enough to demonstrate that disastrous consequences were not far away. Yet it was short enough to avoid massive layoffs in industry, thanks in part to the holiday season. The government was spared the unpleasantness of using troops to unload perishable and essential cargoes. The settlement of seven per cent was tolerable.

Prime Minister Edward Heath no doubt was imagining heads nodding in approval all over the country when he asked the day after the settlement: "Is it not time we found a better way of settling industrial disputes than the costly and wasteful form we have been enduring for the past fortnight in the docks?"

As everyone knows, the government just happens to have completed a comprehensive reappraisal of industrial relations. And nothing has higher priority in its legislation program than these reforms, even if they mean "standing up to the unions."

The government has gone through its first major test with the unions unscathed. In place of angry noises from Tories and unionists, there are bouquets.

The dock strike showed that fair solutions can be reached, even now, when proper machinery is used. After the strike began, the government set up an independent court of inquiry, and the solution was possible because unions and management agreed to accept its proposals. Such good sense is rare.

The day after settlement the government disclosed that 5,008,000 days were lost from strikes during the first six months of this year. There were 2,296 stoppages, involving nearly a million workers and most industries. The record has been worse only twice since the general strike of 1926.

Wildcat Strikes

Only about five per cent of all these strikes were official. The others were the unpredictable wildcat variety. For instance, the staff of London's huge Waterloo Station took the day off recently because one of its members was disciplined in a case of missing property. Nothing could be done, because the law is so loose in its definition of a trade dispute and it protects those involved from any liability for loss or hardship caused to anybody as a result of the dispute.

Reform has been a recognized need for years, even by the unions themselves.

In 1962 the Trades Union Congress agreed to investigate "the possibility of reorganizing the structure of both the TUC and the British trade union movement with a view to making it better fitted to meet modern industrial conditions." But no reorganization followed. Last year the Wilson government proposed reforming legislation, later withdrawn in the face of determined union opposition.

'Cooling-off' Period

Labor first proposed a 28-day "cooling-off period" at government discretion, fines for workers who took part in wildcat strikes and a secret ballot before a strike could be called. By the June 18 election campaign Harold Wilson was deriding Tory proposals for a cooling-off period as impractical.

The Tories propose to make a clear distinction in law between lawful and unlawful strikes; to make collective agreements binding on both sides; to redefine unions and employer associations as corporate legal entities capable of being sued; to clarify rights of employers and employees; to improve communications; to establish industrial courts to deal with industrial disputes, appeals and complaints.

Labor was hamstrung because the unions are an integral part of its organization. The Tories have no such constraint. And they are committed to proceed. But there is room for a little give and take and plenty of consultation. The dock strike and the behavior of all concerned are a promising prelude to the real showdown expected to open later this year.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"DENNIS...DENNIS...I THINK YOU'VE HIT BOTTOM...DENNIS!"

Looking Back

From the Times of August 14, 1910:

London — Florence Nightingale, the famous nurse of the Crimean war and the only woman who ever received the Order of Merit, died suddenly on Saturday afternoon at her London home. During recent years, owing to her feebleness and advanced age, Miss Nightingale had few visitors. In May she celebrated her 90th birthday. She was the first woman to follow a modern army into battle as a nurse, and in the Crimean War gained the title of "Angel of the Crimea."

National Service Or National Joke

Montreal Gazette

The people of Canada should have a statement from their government about its plans for the post office. Is it to be a national service or a national joke?

Big business has, to some extent, accommodated itself to the new situation created by the rotating strikes and retaliatory lock-outs. Alternative means of communication have been put to such extensive use that the post office has quite probably suffered the permanent loss of much of its volume.

Small business and the individual do not have quite the same ability to get along without the regular mail service. If they must find other ways of obtaining the service that the post office once provided quite dependably, it would only be fair if the government would let them know this.

As Executive Chairman Saulnier remarked at his City Hall press conference last week, perhaps Ottawa is experimenting with the idea of doing away with the post office. The public is entitled to know what is going on. At this point, the statement would have to come from Prime Minister Trudeau himself if it is to carry the necessary weight and conviction.

Does the government seriously intend to maintain a postal service? If so, has it reached a firm conclusion that the post office must pay its way? Could anybody outside the cabinet venture to answer these questions with any confidence? Does the cabinet know? Will the Prime Minister please tell us?

Capital Idea

Calgary Albertan

British Columbia Premier W. A. C. Bennett will never lose marks for beating about the bush. In fact, he seems so much like the monarch of all he surveys at home, many Canadians have almost come to accept the view that B.C. is another country. Just to let them know that he hasn't been ignoring national problems, Mr. Bennett has come forward with his own modest proposal to promote Canadian unity — or something: Put the capital in the middle of the country.

Excellent! His reasons have the breath-taking simplicity we have come to expect from him: Land is cheaper and premiers flying to periodic get-togethers of the sort they had in Winnipeg last weekend would "meet in the centre."

What are we waiting for? A public spending program of this magnitude could revive the economy (because, even if land is cheaper, a lot of building will have to be done to fit Ottawa's functions around the junction of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers). Naturally, too, part of the government plant should be put in St. Boniface for the same reasons the National Capital now embraces Ottawa-Hull. Yet, Mr. Bennett's plan has the advantage of allowing recognition of the bilingual nature of the country without involving the special problems associated with Quebec.

Why did no one think of it before this?

Heating an Explosive Gas Line Issue

Gray

IT has been hot enough lately without having a constitutional conference heating up political tempers. But as soon as the figure filberts get through computing the cost of a natural gas pipeline from Alaska to the States via Canada, the thorniest of all confrontations will be in the works. Involved in this imbroglio will be not only 10 Canadian governments but the United States Government and Alaska as well. At the moment, give or take a handful of assumptions, the facts are these:

· The oil industry is beginning to think the big thing in Alaska is not the oil but the natural gas discoveries, for which an almost unlimited demand is developing stateside. The only way in which this supply can be moved to market is through Canada.

The problems facing the industry in getting its oil to market are both herculean physically and outrageously expensive. And some of the toughest problems have not yet been tackled. One is how to get the oil into the tanker Manhattan if it eventually demonstrates the feasibility of tankers in the northwest passage. The shallow continental shelf extends 10 miles from shore. So some sort of 10-mile long loading line must be invented to span the gap over the shifting Arctic ice to tanker anchorage. The cost odds clearly favor the overland pipeline route to the south, but that project is stymied by permafrost and ecological difficulties.

Natural gas is different on all counts. There is no technical problem about snaking a line along the coast from Prudhoe Bay to the Mackenzie river. At the demand end, the gas consumers foresee a serious shortage of supplies ahead. The mainland oil producers want neither Canadian nor Alaskan oil cutting into the lucrative markets. Nobody knows how much gas there is in Alaska. But there will be a market for all it can produce when it can get it to market.

There is only one way in which eager buyers can get together with eager sellers — through Canada. But how through Canada? Into the Trans-Canada system for the eastern market or into the Westcoast system for California? Or both?

Impact On Provinces

Whatever the ultimate decision, it will have an economic impact on Alberta, British Columbia or both. And it will be made in the United States in the negotiation of take-or-pay contracts between buyers and sellers. Then when the deals are made they must be approved by the Federal Power Commission in Washington as to prices at both ends coupled with pipeline tariffs.

Somewhere down the line the conflicting interests of Ottawa, Edmonton, Victoria and even Regina have to be reconciled with decisions already made in the United States. The Canadian segments must be approved by our National Energy Board, and how does it get into the picture if Alberta is involved?

The Alberta Government 15 years ago set up a provincial natural gas transmission monopoly to keep the Canadian government's hand off its natural gas. No export pipeline is permitted to pick up its gas at well heads in Alberta. It can only take delivery from Alberta Gas Trunk Lines at the borders.

The Alberta government naturally wants Alberta's trunk lines to carry Alaska gas through the province. If it does, how does it prevent the Alberta system from coming under the complete control of the National Energy Board? If that happens will the National Energy Board eventually become the price czar of Alberta gas? That would make the interests of the Alberta government, as owner of the natural gas reserves, subservient to a federal government board. From its history, there is no way Alberta would yield on that sort of issue.

More Flexible in B.C.

British Columbia might not be as rigid in its attitude. But would the American banking houses put up a couple of billion dollars worth of other people's money for a project that could be destroyed by the whim of a provincial government? And how would Alberta react, as owner of Trans-Canada's future gas reserves, if that company decided to short circuit its segment of the project around Alberta and through Saskatchewan?

Delays up to two years have been encountered getting relatively simple projects through Washington and Ottawa agencies. In those cases, the projects had the support of Canadian provinces. How long will it take Ottawa and Alberta to sort things out with Trans-Canada and Westcoast Transmission so that they can all be comfortably placed in a constitutional bed together?

When one recalls the intransigence of Alberta when Alberta Gas Trunk Line was invented, and the uproar over Trans-Canada, it is clear that decisions will not come easily in Canada. Then will the government of the United States permit a group of foreign governments to hold a whole handful of veto rights over its most essential source of energy? To ask that question is surely to answer it.

'Elite' Nations Poor Watchdogs

By CLAIRE STERLING

ROME — To prevent a world wasteland, what we need is a watchdog, George Kennan has suggested in the quarterly Foreign Affairs; and since "the devastation of the environment is primarily, though not exclusively, a function of advanced industrial and urban society — logic suggests that it (the watchdog) should be a small group of leading industrial and maritime nations."

Logic may indeed suggest this to some of us, but not to those who happen not to live in a leading industrial or maritime nation.

While the countries we rich ones speak of tactfully as under-developed (UDC) may not devastate the environment as much as developed countries do, they don't enjoy the lucre that comes of these practices either.

The worst offenders against nature are the countries most overfed and glutted with consumer goods, whose personal incomes rose an average 300 dollars last year. The UDCs are rarely glutted with anything and the rise in their average personal incomes amounted to $10 last year. When it comes to choosing between yet another devastatingly dirty factory and cleaner air or water, therefore, what's good for the United States or Sweden or Russia is not necessarily good for Ceylon or Kenya or the UAR.

Furthermore, the UDCs are not all that guiltless about nature. Their kind of devastating may have to do less with industry than agriculture. But inasmuch as only 2 per cent of the earth's surface is cultivable and the planet's population is going to double in three decades, they can do a lot of damage all the same.

The fact is, though — and it is a pertinent and scandalous fact — that the worst sins of this kind are perpetrated on the advice of those leading industrial nations Mr. Kennan is talking about.

In an admirably succint report to a conference near Washington on development a couple of years ago, an international conservation expert observed that "several aid-granting organizations were involved in destroying some renewable natural resources," especially through such favorite projects as drilling bore holes for cattle, constructing dams, eliminating tsetse fly, developing large-scale irrigation.

At worst, he said, "such programs have accelerated the spread of deserts, put formerly stable mountain or desert areas permanently out of production, lowered the basic productivity they tried to raise and thus created poorer living and feeding conditions than existed before the aid commenced." The errors were in fact of such magnitude, he noted, as to "make one wonder sometimes how any developing country can seriously consider requesting large scale assistance programs."

●

Apart from the advanced nations' questionable wisdom in these matters, their belatedly virtuous concern about purifying air, earth and water is already imposing unequal hardships on the poorer African and Asian states. Kenya for instance, has been talked into such an exemplary policy for keeping its rivers clean that a foreign firm preparing to invest a considerable sum for a large factoy there has balked at the extra cost and gone elsewhere.

The mark of developed country

Stories like this are too easily come across, and might soon reach a high point of drama in regard to DDT. Many of us have heard all about this wicked chemical compound, and how many thousands of tons of it now permeate the air and the land, underground springs, rivers and oceans.

Nevertheless, DDT has saved millions of lives in malaria-ridden countries and millions if not billions of tons of food crops in tropical climates where preying insects luxuriate. It is cheap: any other effective pesticide on the market costs at least five times as much. It is simple enough for an illiterate peasant to handle. And it is comparatively harmless to human beings — compared at least with a killer like parathion, which murders at the touch.

Supposing Mr. Kennan's watchdog nations should decide to ban DDT the world over. What can be used to save the world's already inadequate food crops, a third of them lost to insects even with the use of DDT? Who is going to pay five times as much for parathion or something equally costly and lethal in India, Pakistan, the Philippines?

Who would compensate these farmers for the produce they might still try to save with DDT, stricken from the permitted entry list of imports by the rich industrial nations? Would these richer nations care to make up the difference?

This is not merely or even primarily a question of charitable interest or compassion. Since the starving half of the world's population is tending to multiply three times faster than the well-fed half, the well-fed are going to be heavily outnumbered — the figures go into billions — by the year 2000. Every bushel of wheat less that is grown by then will make another ravenous enemy.

Who among us, counting our calories and watching our cholesterol count in the world's advanced industrial and urban society, would like to live in permanent siege under these conditions?

This is not to say that DDT shouldn't be banned, or that sophisticated industrial nations shouldn't accept their rightful environmental responsibilities. It is simply a reminder that elite decision-making, especially in a field so immense, is at best a dubious and at worst a decidedly dangerous business.

More About Stanfield: He Does Have Problems

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — There was so much morbid defeatism in what I wrote Thursday about the creaking style and methods of Robert Stanfield that it may embitter loyal Conservatives.

This bothers me less than that others less partisan would think me unfair to this decent man. In redress, well perhaps to redress — I want to identify some of the difficulties Mr. Stanfield faces as a Conservative.

Rubbery Liberals

Political strategy and warfare can usually be reduced to two elements, personalities and issues. Mr. Stanfield as I argued Thursday loses badly on the personality score compared, say, to Pierre Trudeau or John Diefenbaker. He hasn't the charisma, the flair, the tricks, the impact.

What about issues elsewhere?

Dalton Camp has taken joy recently from the rubbery condition of the liberals and liberal ideology in the U.S. He's taken with the analysis that for several decades a conservative bent in Americans will reject the liberals in favor of ordinary cautious centre-of-the-road men like Nixon. Mr. Camp hasn't transferred this analysis to Canada where it would seem to make the future bright for Robert Stanfield.

It can't be done except wishfully in daydreams because a different political system, much different traditions and the Liberals sprawling left and right of centre, make it foolish.

Fragmented Support

More particularly, Mr. Stanfield has a fragmented and uneasy set of supporters scattered across Canada when he gets down to identifying issues and his party's policies on them.

A good example is provided by his uneasiness over the White Paper on Tax Reform. Crudely put, the Benson proposals are most attractive to the populist concerned over the little people, the ones who will be taken off the tax rolls or have their deductions for tax reduced.

On the other hand, the reforms in the corporate area which affect high-income citizens have stirred the economic elite. Mr. Stanfield has tried to run with both groups. He has demanded the withdrawal of the proposals because of their unsettling consequences for business and the infinite damage they will do to our free-enterprise system. He has also claimed that he'd give an even better deal to the under-privileged with low incomes.

The similar split has plagued the Tory leader over the guaranteed annual income proposal he took up so gingerly. Some conservative-minded men enthuse about the guaranteed annual income. They see it wiping out the whole elaborate welfare bureaucracy.

Others are appalled at the concept so sure to subsidize the lazy and improvident elements in society. Some Red Tories see the plan as the natural evolution to complete a jerry-built welfare system.

We heard all three attitudes last fall at the Conservative Thinkers Conference. It is not clear yet whether the party is for or against the idea. Why such doubt? It's the varied composition of the interests and beliefs to be found in those who claim the Progressive Conservative Party as their own.

Five Groups

Most of the core support for Mr. Stanfield's party is found among the following five groups:

Firstly, the bed-rock group is the one whose members remember the British connection, the Crown, the Monarch, the traditions of the military. They are the lineal descendants and the spiritual heirs of both the United Empire Loyalists and the glorious revolution.

This strength seems to be declining as death and a changing-age pattern in the population blends with a surge of nationalist feelings and Britain's decline from world leadership.

Secondly, there has been a consistent belief among many backers of the Tory party that it stood four square for free enterprise and against creeping socialism, expanding bureaucracy and interfering government. These Tories are the equivalents of the hard rocks who back the Republicans down the line in the United States.

Marcel Lambert, George Hees and and Lewis Brand are representative of this interest in the Stanfield party. Unfortunately, in two of the booming provinces this theme has been taken over effectively by the Social Credit.

Thirdly, there's the populist core group in the Tory party with which John Diefenbaker identified and brought along.

Know-Nothings

These are the people in the know-nothing and greenbacks and "raise less wheat and more hell" traditions, the little people, the fellow Canadians who trusted John who don't want anything fancy and intellectual but do want a folksy leader and attention from him to their immediate concerns. There are scads of such voters left in Canada, but Robert Stanfield doesn't qualify as a messiah to them.

Fourthly, there's a smattering of Conservatives in the Disraeli-Salisbury traditions. They have an organic view of society. They are their brothers' keeper. They are predisposed to reform out of a deep concern over poverty and exploitation. David MacDonald and Gordon Fairweather in Stanfield's caucus fit this category. They seem strange fish, these Red Tories, few in number and derided by many of their colleagues.

Lastly, there are the practical, eager young people who might opt for the Tories, thinking this way sooner or later the Conservatives must come to power. They are the alternative. The Liberals have been so successful that few of these people are coming to the Conservatives and in any case they bring little in the way of policy, ideas, or issues, only willingness to work in organization.

Can't Be Forthright

If these are the various bases on which the Conservative Party rests, the reasons why Mr. Stanfield cannot be forthright and ideological on issues and program are understandable.

He hasn't the means in himself to play the personality game. He hasn't a unity in the interests ranging be*hind him to allow the clarity* and appeal of a program built around great issues.

A Kind of Gratefulness for Life

By MICHAEL KERNAN

Notes on a tour of Walter Reed General Hospital, where nearly 800 wounded veterans are patients:

In the long white brick corridors, many times repainted, a constant flow of people. Far ahead, crossing an intersection, a man is wheeled past on a gurney, his fingers interlaced behind his raised head. Nurses, visitors bearing flowers, men in the ubiquitous blues manoeuvring wheelchairs, one-legged men on metal crutches, an orderly in ragged but clean whites patiently guiding a single cigarette butt down the hall with a giant pushbroom Sign on a trash bin: "Smoking is discouraged."

★ ★ ★

In Ward 35, James R. Johnson, 20, is chatting with friends across the aisle about the Cobra, a helicopter gunship that literally fires a stream of lead, 6,000 rounds a minute.

"Charlie don't have a chance. His stuff is bad," he says. "Cobra runs down a football field, it can put a bullet every six inches."

His right leg is pinioned in an open traction splint a few inches off the bed. The foot-long scar on his right thigh (sniper fire, Cambodia) sinks in almost to the bone.

"Musta been a rookie got me, he didn't do much of a job."

His bed frame is covered with get-well cards including one from the Young Women's Missionary Society of Weeping Willow Church in Charlotte, N.C. Overhead is a large yarn picture in a wood frame, a country scene with a well. Johnson finished it in a week, which he claims is the all-time record.

There are 45 patients in the ward, each bed is a little world, a clutter of cards, puzzles, books, styrofoam water pitchers, oranges, apples and portable TV sets. A man named Paul Revere Smith of Falls Church, Va., got people to donate 300 sets. Most of the sets are on, and in front of one — on which a pretty girl is talking animatedly about men's hair spray — a slight youth dozes on his side. He has no feet.

At the far end of the ward, four men silently watch Lucille Ball making faces at an Indian chief in pulsing color on a large console. Chessmen are scattered on a table. Beds fill the day rooms adjacent to the ward, because there are more than 2,000 patients in the 1,650-bed hospital. On a chair lie the current Newsweek and a metal arm brace.

A double amputee, his legs gone above the knees, swings himself neatly out of bed and into a wheelchair. One of the men strolling by wears a sweater that shows Grant Wood's painting "American Gothic' and the legend, "Make Love, Not War." Someone has inked a peace symbol on his bedstead, and on the sole of a plaster foot cast is written "tickle."

★ ★ ★

"All but a few are orthopedic," says deputy public affairs officer Louis F. Arrants Jr. "We get them home much sooner than before, as soon as the wound is closed and they can move around. Some of them get here as little as three days after they're wounded. It's amazing. A 'copter brings them to a M.U.S.T. inflatable hospital in the combat area, and there they are given definitive medical care — definitive, not just first aid. That's where lives are saved. Most of them go to Japan after that, and then here."

There is one triple amputee at Reed, no quadruple amputees. Reed's army centre specializes in orthopedics, but two-thirds of the patients in the entire complex are service dependents with the various ailments that a general hospital handles.

"People say there are more mutilated in this war. What's happening is that we're saving more lives. Men who wouldn't have been alive in the other wars. There's a kind of gratefulness."

(In the burn centre in Texas, Arrants adds, the most damaged victims of both sexes lie in the same ward, naked because they cannot bear to have so much as a sheet over them. They are too disfigured for their sex to be determined at a glance.)

★ ★ ★

Robert Boyer, 20, who has a severe leg wound, argues about the minimum combat age with his neighbor, Francis X. Haubner, who stepped on a mine and lost his right foot, temporarily lost his sight and got his left leg and hands pocked with shrapnel. Haubner was hit just a month ago. He had been in Vietnam two months. He used to work in a foundry in Woburn, Mass., but he isn't going back because it was too noisy and dirty. Now he is waiting for his artificial foot.

★ ★ ★

Outside on the porch, a man sits on the railing with his crutch beside him. His jacket is slung over his front to hide his one-leggedness.

★ ★ ★

A new mother waits in a corridor with her baby, its tiny hand grasping her index finger. A girl is trundled by on a gurney, holding up her plasma bottle and laughing at something the orderly has said. Muted voices. The clatter of dishes. TV laughter, interrupted regularly by a crack of static from an IBM machine somewhere.

★ ★ ★

In the officers' ward there are some private rooms ("We find the men don't care for them") and at the end of the hall an 8-bed section, the snake pit, famous from Seoul to Saigon for its illegal champagne parties and its swashbuckling residents, who seem to pass on its aura by osmosis. Its name is written in glittering letters over the lintel.

Four of the patients sit around a table playing five-card stud with puzzle pieces for chips.

"We're all kinds," says Pete Malphrus, the dean of the snake pit after 2½ years (an automatic weapon shattered the bone below his right knee), "warrant officer to major. One's an aviator, one's an engineer, one's a doctor" — he waves at a companion, Lawrence Demeo, gets a muttered answer, "—and one's a farmer. A farmer?"

Laughter. "Armor. I said armor."

Demeo, with both legs in casts, says he was with the 173rd Division, which pioneered in pacification work. It was a success, he says, but it's hardly mentioned in the press any more. About half the men in the ward don't plan to stay in the service, which is far less than average. The oldest is Puerto Rican Fernando L. Rosario, 30, who survived the 1969 Tet offensive without a scratch, returned to the States and was on his second Vietnam tour when a mine caught him just after the Christmas Day truce. He lost his right foot.

"I've been training with the device," he says. "I can stay on it eight hours a day now. Fits right under the kneecap, molded over the tendon. You put a wedge in at the top and it stays on. No straps."

A tall, rangy patient with a bandage patch between his eyes stalks in and joins the game. His shirt is draped over his left shoulder. The left frontal lobe of his skull is sunken in, and a neat scar runs over the top of his shaven head from ear to ear. The middle finger of his right hand is missing, and the tip of the index finger looks chewed and ragged.

He moves with the authority of a big man. Fishing a 5 dollar bill from his pocket, he deftly plucks up some puzzle pieces with articulate fingers. Someone tells him to hold up on the money and he drawls, "If this is for funzies, I'm going back to bed." The shirt falls from his shoulder. His left arm is a bandaged stump six inches long.

The others are discussing what they will do when they get out of the service, and he says harshly, "I'm gonna get a job pushing a broom in the PX. You can put a broom under a stump." Everyone laughs, a short, harsh laugh.

★ ★ ★

Outside, visitors and convalescents stroll about in the sultry afternoon on beautifully landscaped grounds. Under a young sycamore, a youth wearing blues but no wristlet lounges in the shade. He takes off his shoes and socks and dreamily swishes his feet back and forth through the long grass, wiggling his toes.

POLICE COURT

A 20-year-old man was sentenced to one year definite and 18 months indefinite Thursday in provincial court after Judge William Ostler read a presentence report.

Brian James Tucker, of 1551 Arrow, appeared for sentence on a charge of possessing heroin.

He was told by Ostler he was being sentenced to the term at Oakalla with recommendation for transfer to Haney because it would provide an opportunity for rehabilitation.

Court was told Tucker was a heroin addict.

"No judge or magistrate can see a young man like you addicted to a vicious drug like heroin without feeling sympathy," Ostler said.

"By yourself you can't get out of it, that is clear. The time is now to try to save you from a wretched short life of degradation."

"The tragedy of this report is that you have potential . . . This is the chance, the opportunity to break out of this."

Wendell Aakre, 28, of 1915 Laighton Road, was fined $400 on a charge of possession of marijuana.

He was arrested August 5.

The prosecution asked for a heavy sentence because it was alleged Aakre's age left doubt that he was experimenting with the drug.

"You mean you have to be young to experiment?" Ostler said in rejecting the request and opting for the fine.

Patrick Corneille, 36, of 4082 Raymond, was fined $300 on a charge of impaired driving. He was arrested July 31 with a blood-alcohol reading of .15 per cent.

Postmen Apologize

HANEY (CP) — Twenty-two postal workers here who oppose their national union's policy of rotating strikes have apologized to residents for an interruption in mail delivery service this week.

The Haney Council of Postal Unions placed an advertisment in the weekly Gazette, published Wednesday, saying it regretted the interruption, which happened Monday when union members from Greater Vancouver picketed the local post office.

The Haney mailmen had voted overwhelmingly against taking part in rotating strikes, although they have said they would join in any countrywide strike. But they did not cross the picket line Monday.

500,000 Bees Free

TITUSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Some of an estimated 500,000 bees set free by a traffic accident were settling into new homes today.

L. Rodney Stewart was hauling the bees in 100 hives on a truck Thursday. He lost control and the vehicle struck a utility pole in this northwestern Pennsylvania town.

Stewart, owner of Stewart Honey Bee Products Co. set out new hives in an effort to reclaim his swarms. Observers reported his action was at least partially successful.

Riding Clinic Set Next Week

Vancouver Island's western horsemen (and women) will have a chance to brush up on their riding skills during a six-day riding clinic in Victoria next week.

Clinic instructor is Miss Dolly Hughes, instructor of equitation and horse management at Washington State University in Pullman.

Miss Hughes is well known throughout the northwest for her equitation, rodeo and 4-H clinics in Washington, Idaho, Montana and Calgary.

Miss Hughes said the main emphasis during the clinic, which runs from Monday to Saturday, will be on "combining methods for preparing the horse and training the rider for show. We'll stress rider control of the horse."

Enrollees will be divided into groups according to ability. In addition to intensive riding sessions, they will take part in discussions of anatomy as it affects the horse's performance, ground training of weanlings, yearlings and two-year-olds, equipment and show ring etiquette.

TWO SESSIONS

There will be two sessions per day, one in the morning at 10 at Parkside Stables, 1533 Ash Road, and one in the evening at 7:30 at Deerleap Farm, 736 Pears Road, Metchosin. Enrollees will choose time of session preferred.

Sponsors of the clinic are Mrs. Kay Lees, 4003 Bow Road, and Mrs. Dale Caldwell, 4822 Townsend Drive. Thirty riders will be admitted, and there are still some openings. Interested persons should contact either Mrs. Lees at 477-4727 or Mrs. Caldwell at 479-2401.

All riders for both sessions will attend at 7:30 p.m. Monday for introduction, discussion and demonstration at Deerleap Farm.

There will be no class Monday morning.

Europe Still Needs NATO To Keep Peace

By CARL HARTMAN

BRUSSELS (AP) — Now that the Soviet Union and West Germany have promised not to use force against one another, some people are sure to suggest that there no longer is any good reason for the North Atlantic Alliance—that the chief danger of a European war has disappeared.

Analysis

This kind of talks gets no support at the headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization outside Brussels.

NATO officials are not commenting officially; the private view generally is that the treaty helps relax tensions but does not mean the allies can let down their guard.

NATO diplomats believe that the treaty only became possible because West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's foreign allies were firmly behind him.

The point of the Atlantic Alliance, as these diplomats see it, is that North America and Western Europe must depend on one another for defence, not against the comparatively mild policy today of the men who rule the Soviet Union but against any shift to a new aggressive policy that those men or their successors might make. Weakening the Atlantic Alliance might encourage such a shift, they think.

NO TROOP CHANGES

"You still have the same configuration of troops in central Europe," said one NATO diplomat, "and that obliges us to have something comparable."

He and his colleagues argue that because the Western Allies have held together for the 21 years of NATO's history, Soviet leaders have seen that aggression would be futile. The diplomats think no quantity of treaties can match the effectiveness of united defence in preventing war.

Nevertheless, support can be expected to grow for the idea of talks with the Russians on a new system of security for Europe. At the end of NATO's last big meeting in Rome nearly three months ago, success in the Soviet-West German negotiations was mentioned as one of the first steps toward such a conference.

Another recent step in the same direction has been the first Soviet indication of willingness to talk about reducing the number of troops in Europe.

But the governments in the alliance are likely to insist, as Secretary-General Manlio Brosio did in a recent speech, that any new system will have to be worked out with the support and participation of NATO.

Indians To Lecture At Malaspina

DUNCAN — Cowichan Indian band members will lecture at Malaspina College this fall, Cowichan Chief Dennis Alphonse said Wednesday.

At a meeting between the band's education committee and two Malaspina College teachers, Kevin Roberts and Ken Baxter, it was decided that Indian lecturers would teach evening classes at Nanaimo.

Alphonse said he had a group of people lined up to teach courses in Indian tradition and contemporary history with emphasis on the Cowichan band.

Following is a list of courses and instructors from the Cowichan band: the history of the Cowichan band, Ellwood Modeste; Indians and Education today, Mrs. Dennis Alphonse; ceremonial dances, Abel Joe; assimilation and retaining Indian identity, Ken Sam; band council, reserves and federal white paper, Dennis Alphonse; arts and crafts, Ray Peters; residential schools, Ben George; and Indian organizations, Ross Modeste.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Dry air in the ridge of high pressure over southern B.C. will give continued sunny weather to southern parts of the province. Afternoon temperatures will be a little warmer Saturday.

The cloud will thicken up today on the north coast though with a disturbance from the Gulf of Alaska and occasional rain is expected. This system will spread cloud into the central interior late today and it will set off showers there Saturday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET Jr.

Did you know that too much sun can do more than give you a burn that is painful and even dangerous? When exposure to the sun is enough to fry your tender skin it also may help to cause some severe stomach disorders.

What happens to give you a stomach-ache is that the sunburn starts up the machine in your body that produces an increased amount of gastric secretion. Severe overexposure to the ultraviolet light of the sun's rays may also produce inflammatory changes in your stomach. Your doctor will call it gastritis.

The indigestion you may get during a good case of sunburn is probably due to release of the substance called histamine. Besides being the cause of an increase in the gastric secretions in your stomach, sunburn can cause a constriction of your breathing tubes, which are the bronchi in your lungs.

Massachusetts Backs No-Fault Insurance Plan

BOSTON (AP) — A new state law will make Massachusetts motorists the first in the United States to be covered by a new "no-fault" system of insurance. But one insurance company says it won't continue writing auto policies in the state and more threaten to follow suit.

Gov. Francis W. Sargent signed the bill Thursday night, ending a long effort to change the 43-year-old compulsory liability insurance law under which the state's 2.5 million motorists pay the highest auto insurance premiums in the U.S.

The key feature of the no-fault bill requires that a driver's own insurance company reimburse him for medical bills and lost wages up to $2,000 regardless of who was at fault in an accident.

Suits for "pain and suffering" are ruled out when medical bills are less than $500, except for certain cases involving permanent physical damage. Persons whose medical bills and lost wages exceed $2,000 can sue for the additional amount.

Advocates say the no-fault plan should make lower rates possible because it will eliminate the costs of lawsuits for the amounts under $2,000.

To assure a reduction in premiums, the legislature added to the bill a requirement that all rates—liability, property damage, fire-theft and collision—be reduced 15 per cent.

Insurance companies, whose rates in the state have been frozen since 1967, say they are losing money and object to the enforced reduction.

Aetna Casualty and Surety Company said Thursday it would follow its promised policy of not writing new or renewed auto insurance in the state.

Test Considered

WINNIPEG (CP) — The possibility of testing Manitoba's public automobile insurance legislation in the Supreme Court of Canada has been advanced by the Insurance Bureau of Canada.

Harley B. Vannan, western advisory committee chairman of the bureau, said in an interview that Toronto lawyer John J. Robinette has been retained to look into the matter.

Vannan said that, contingent on Robinette's advice, the bureau might seek a supreme court test on the basis that the NDP government's bill overrides federal statutes allowing nationally-chartered insurance companies to sell auto insurance in Manitoba.

Jasper Visits Up

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — The number of visitors to Jasper National Park this year has increased by about 56 per cent from last year, park officials announced Thursday. Attendance from Jan. 1 to July 31 increased to 793,258 from 507,665 in the same period last year.

Vehicle traffic for the five-month period increased to 264,352 from 186,965.

Costs Prohibitive

EDMONTON (CP) — Improvements in television in northern Canada are still a few years away, according to Eugene S. hallman of Toronto, vice-president and general manager of the CBC English network. He told a news conference here Thursday that a satellite would improve the service, but would cost at least $50 million.

Supermarket Opens

STANDOFF, Alta. (CP) — A $30,000 co-operative supermarket was opened Thursday on the Blood Indian reserve in southern Alberta. A tribe spokesman said it was the first in Canada to be owned and operated by Indians. Profits from the venture will be split between the band fund and registered customers.

Aquacare Signs Pact to Produce Products in Italy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Aquacare International Ltd., a Vancouver-based firm producing equipment to clean and sterilize water using ultra-violet rays and carbon filters, has announced an agreement for manufacture and distribution of its products in Italy.

Company president Gordon W. Robertson said the exclusive licence arrangement, Aquacare's first in Europe, calls for minimum royalties of $1,275,000 over the next 10 years.

He also announced the acquisition of Cerco Chemicals Ltd. of Toronto, which has developed a "plastic chlorine exchange resin" produced in small pellets which permit the control of chlorine levels without valves, meters or other mechanical devices.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Upswing in Industrials

Major North American stock markets ended their decline today with industrials at New York and Toronto marking up gains.

At Toronto the market turned upward in early afternoon trading, cancelling morning losses anf interrupting four consecutive losing sessions. Largest gains were in beverage, communication and trust and loan sectors. Industrials finished ahead .26.

Analysts at New York said recent favorable economic news had put investors in more of a buying mood than they had been of late. Insustrials posted a 3.94 point gain.

AT TORONTO, indusrrials, Falconbridge rose 1 to 135, CPR 1 to 56, Aimco ⅞ to 10½,Dome Pete ⅞ to 53¾ and Income Disability ⅛ to 7.

Texas Gulf Sulphur dropped ⅛ to 13⅝, Erie Diversified ½ to 5, Simpsons ⅜ to 14, Thomson Newspapers ¼ to 16¼ and Inco ⅛ to 40½.

Bethlehem was up ½ to 16¼, Lake Dufault ⅜ to 15⅜, Sherritt ¼ to 19, Madeline 15 cents to $3.80 and Embako ⅛ to 13⅛.

Dennison was down ⅜ to 24¼, Placer ⅜ to 32, Granduc 35 cents to $8.05 and Consolidated Marbenor 10 cents to $3.75.

Sourry Rainboy gained ⅝ to 17⅝, Alberta Eastern Gas 20 cents to $5.10, Central-Del Rio 20 cents to $10, Siebens 15 cents to $8.10 and BP Oil and Gas 15 cents to $4.30.

Dynamic lost five cents to cents and Syracuse seven cents $1.50, Permo eight cents to 96 to $2.23.

AT LONDON the stock market moved lower in quiet trading. The continued drift on Wall Street and a warning from engineering employers on cost inflation and the possible effects pushed prices lower.

IOS rallid after Thursday's weakness following attempts by former chairman Cornfeld at a compromise with the new management.

Domw, Gulf, Abitibi, Hollinger, Inco, Noranda, Price Bros., and Algoma were Canadians to ease but losses did not exceed two points. Canadian Pacific was a dull spot 5½ points down at 137⅜.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade was generally light at the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, with most of the buying activity centred in rapeseed and rye.

Rye posted solid gains, as offers continued to meet good shipper absorption.

The Canadian Wheat Board announced an increase of ½ cent in oats, and ¾ cents in barleys one feed and lower. Malting barleys down to and including 3 C.W. 6-row are down 1⅛ cents and 3 C.W. 2-row, and one, two and three feed were down two cents.

Lakehead prices for Class Two and IGA wheat were all down ¼ cent.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Greyhound

Greyhound Lines of Canada Ltd. increased earnings by 63 per cent during the first half, due mostly to acquisition of the Coachways system early in the year.

Earnings for the six months were $1.45 million or 31 cents a share compared with $891,934 or 19 cents a share in the same period of 1969.

Gross revenues were $21.8 million, up from $16 million.

R. L. Borden, president, said the increase was aided by higher express revenues which came partially as a result of unsettled postal conditions.

B-N Corp.

Six-month results of British Newfoundland Corp. Ltd. and its subsidiaries show an increase in net earnings amounting to nearly $110,000, or $1.13 million against $1.02 million.

Sales of copper concentrates accounted for $3.6 million of revenue, up about $600,000 from last year, and operating profit was $711,278, consistent with a year ago. Investment income was nearly double at $283,773. Operating expense rose by more than $300,000 to $1.78 million.

Wholly - owned British Newfoundland Exploration Ltd. is carrying out extensive exploration, and Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp. Ltd., reports contracts to 85 per cent of estimated total cost have been let for the huge hydro project.

Bathurst

Colsolidated-Bathurst Ltd. has signed an agreement granting Consolidated Developments Ltd. access rights to part of Anticosti Island, where the latter company is involved in an oil drilling project.

In exchange for the rights, Consolidated-Bathurst has obtained rights under the exploration licences issued to Consolidated Developmemts by the Quebec natural resources department.

Consolidated Developments has agreed to let Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. sink a test well on the Gulf of St. Lawrence Island.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminum Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings of $45.6 million or $1.27 a share for its first six months of 1970, up from $37.8 million or $1.11 a year eearlier.

Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd., whose accounts are consolidated with Alcan, its parent firm, reports net income of $36 million in the first half, up from $30.1 million.

Alcan president Nathanael Davis said consolidated gross revenues for the first half were $694 million, up from $611 million. All figures are in U.S. terms.

Husky Oil

Husky Oil Ltd. had net earnings for the first six months of 1970 totalling $1.64 million compared with $2.8 million in the same period of 1969.

Earnings were 14 cents a common share for the six months, down 12 cents while sales and operating revenues were up 12 per cent at $81.87 million.

"The first-half earnings decreased primarily because of high interest charges, higher prices of materials, higher costs of services and higher costs of doing business that are troubling most industries," said president Gene E. Roark.

"Among factors expected to improve the trend of earnings in the last half are strengthening of markets, primarily in the U.S., for gasoline, other light oil products and asphalt."

Mavericks Attack U.S. Trade Bill

WASINGTON (WP) — The house ways and means committee formally approved the first major foreign trade legislation in eight years Thursday, 17 to 7.

But a hard core of committee dissidents, mostly junior members, blasted the bill as "restrictive, ill-timed and provincial . . . inflationary . . . a backward step for America and the world."

Such vocal and public rebellion, particularly among younger members, is rare in ways and means. Although the committee does not lack for differences, strong dissent ordinarily is confined to committee chambers or attributed to anonymous members — in large part out of deference to its prestigious chairman, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills (D.—Ark.)

Actually Mills is not believed to be entirely unsympathetic to the Maverick group. While he will introduce the bill and is expected to manage it on the house floor some time after Labor Day, Sept .7, he is known to be concerned over some of the measure's restrictive features — mandatory import quotas on textiles and shoes and potential limitations on other commodities — although he voted for them in committee.

Voting against the bill and subscribing to the subsequent harsh denunciation of the bill were Reps. Barber B. Conable Jr. (R—N.Y.), Sam Gibbons (D—Fla.), William J. Green (D—Pa.), James C. Corman (D—Calif.), Jerry L. Pettis (R—Calif.), Al Ullman (D—Ore.) and Charles A. Vanik (D—Ohio).

REASONS OUTLINED

Corman, Green and Gibbons are the three most junior Democrats on the committee. Pettis is the most junior Republican.

Rep. Herman T. Schneebeli (R—Pa.) took no stand by voting present.

Before the vote Conable, Gibbons, Corman anl Pettis held a press conference during which they gave a rundown of their reasons for opposing the bill.

After the vote, they were hosts at a luncheon in the Rayburn builling attended by representatives of farm groups, labor, liberal trade organizations, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the League of Women Voters, and consumer advocates led by Ralph Nader. The purpose was to map a national campaign against the bill before it reaches the house floor next month. (The AFL-CIO pushed hard for some form of comprehensive import restrictions but is known to be disappointed in the bill as it now stands.)

The committee also agreed to ask the house rules committee for a closed rule and eight hours of debate. The closed rule would bar substantive amendments from the floor.

Efforts to win a floor vote on each title of the bill and to take a separate vote on a provision that would forgive U.S. taxes on the export earnings of American producers until they are repatriated as dividends were overwhelmingly defeated.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Pitfalls of Gift Loan

(This is a service of the Times and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

By
Edgar A. Downey, C.A.

There are more pitfalls for the unwary who may incur gift tax without even knowing they had made a gift.

With the current shortage of capital it is becoming more common for young couples to turn to their families for money to buy a house or other major purhcase and, being family financing, the concept of interest rates and repayment terms is often generously in favor of the borrowers.

Now it appears that the minister of national revenue may also be a party to be considered in such family financing arrangements.

According to an information bulletin issued on June 30, 1970, the taxation division will regard interest free terms loans to a close relative as a basis for deeming a taxable gift to the extent of the amount of interest which would normally be incurred.

If such a loan is wholly repayable on demand the fact that no interest is charged will not give rise to any deemed gift value by the minister. At the time a demand loan is granted there is no way to determine how long it might be outstanding and so no way to calculate the total amount of deemed interest to be valued as a gift.

VALUE ESTABLISHED

However if, as is more often the situation, the loan is repayable over a period of years then the gift value will be extablished "in accordance with ordinary commercial practice" applied to discount the present value of the repayment to be received at a future time.

If a man loans his son $10,000 to be repaid $1,000 a year over a 10-year term without interest those repayments have a current value of something less than $10,000 because the loan could earn interest on the amount owing during the 10 year term. If the actual current value of property transferred to the son is really $10,000 then the father will be deemed to have made a gift of the difference between the discounted present value of the 10 $1,000 annual repayments and the $10,000 face value of the loan.

At 5 per cent per annum theoretical interest the present value of the 10 annual repayments would be about $7,720. Thus the deemed gift would be about $2,280 ($10,000 less $7,720.) At 10 per cent the deemed gift would be about $3,825. There is the standard $2,000 exemption from gift tax so at 5 per cent the taxable gift would be only $228 approximately which would cost only $27 tax but at 10 per cent the taxable gift would be $1,825 which would cost $219 tax.

SIGNIFICANT

Obviously the rate of theoretical interest is most significant but the government information bulletin which explains the intent to tax does not specify any rate except in the vague terms of "ordinary commercial practice" and in practice rates vary widely between 5 per cent and 30 per cent or more.

For anyone who makes a family type loan it would seem prudent to either make it repayable on demand or stipulate some low rate of interest, such as 2 per cent per year or, to be even safer, make it a demand loan with interest.

For such transactions which were completed prior to June 30, 1970, the new taxing rules will not apply, but anyone making a non-interest transaction in future should be most cautious.

Further Easing Of Cash

OTTAWA (CP) — Currency in circulation and demand deposits in the chartered banks rose $128 million to $9,250 million last week, the Bank of Canada reported Thursday.

The bank indicated the extent of easing of this available cash figure in the last two months.

After being held close to $8,960 million in March, April and May, it rose to $9,061 million in June and $9,162 million in July.

Including term and notice deposits, the publicly-held money supply rose last month to $29,404 million from $29,154 million in June and $28,736 million in May. The latest unadjusted figure, for Aug. 5, showed the total at $29,803 million.

The average yield on long-term federal government bonds at market prices this week rose to 8.01 from 792 last week and 7.91 a week earlier.

$ EXCHANGE

VICTORIA—Purchase of U.S. funds in terms of the Canadian dollar was quoted by the Royal Bank today at $1.01¾ for cheques, $1.01⅝ for cash, 1% for silver. Sales were $1.03 for cheques and $1.03⅝ for cash.

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was off 1-16 at $1.02 5-16. Pound sterling was off 3-16 at $2.44 7-16.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Canadian dollar was up 5-64 at 97 49.64 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling was down 1-64 at $2.38 29-32.

MANAGEMENT CAREERS
AVAILABLE........

Industrial, commercial, professional and governmental organizations across Canada constantly search for qualified management personnel.

The Certified General Accountants' Association in co-operation with the University of British Columbia offers a course of study which over the years has proven excellent training for people with management potential.

Employed in the field of financial management and earning a full salary, by evening lectures or correspondence, the student accomplishes an in-depth study of managerial subjects leading to the professional designation "C.G.A."

The course, approximately five years in length, is offered by lecture at U.B.C., partially at University of Victoria and most regional colleges or by correspondence. University entrance or commercial accountancy specialty is required. Registration will close on August 30, and applications and enquiries should be sent to THE REGISTRAR:

GM Settles With Nader For $425,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has received $425,000 from General Motors in an out-of-court settlement of his invasion-of-privacy suit.

Nader said Thursday he will use some of the money to monitor GM's activities in the areas of safety, pollution and consumer relations. "They are going to be financing their own ombudsman," he said.

The suit, filed in November, 1966, alleged that GM began a campaign to intimidate Nader after he wrote his book, Unsafe At Any Speed, which was critical of automobile safety standards.

Nader complained in the suit that GM hired a private investigator, Vincent Gillen, whose detectives inquired into his private life.

The book prompted a safety crusade and a Senate hearing during which James M. Roche, then president of the giant auto-maker, publicly apologized for any harassment.

Nader sued for damages—$26 million was the figure reported at the time although his lawyers said Thursday the total was $12 million.

SOME WITHDRAWN

The $425,000 that GM paid Thursday was for compensatory damages, and the auto-maker said claims for punitive damages were withdrawn as part of the settlement.

GM said it denies any wrongdoing or legal liability in connection with the claim and that "the settlement in no respect constitutes an admission of any of the claims asserted by Nader."

"Settlement of the lawsuit at this time was considered desirable" to save the time and expense of further litigation, GM said.

Nader said in a statement that GM could have delayed the case further and therefore "it was deemed wiser to settle the case and devote the proceeds, after deduction of legal fees and expenses, to the cause of consumer protection and corporate responsibility, especially in the latter area—General Motors's responsibility."

Ari Ends Talks Of Marital Rift

LONDON (Reuters) — Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis Wednesday described reports of a rift in his marriage with the former Jacqueline Kennedy as "unbelievable mythology."

Interviewed by The Evening Standard during a six-day business trip to London, Onassis said:

"We are both ideally happy and anybody who says that is not the case doesn't know what they are talking about."

'ANTI-INFLATION POLICIES PAYING OFF'

Small Increase in Consumer Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices rose by half of one per cent in July and Consumer Affairs Minister Basford hailed the unusually slow rate of increase as a sign of success for the federal government's anti-inflation program.

He issued a statement saying that the increase in the consumer price index, released Thursday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, shows that "two years of perseverance in the application of anti-inflation policies by the government are paying off."

George Hees, the former Conservative trade minister, saw it differently. The MP for Prince Edward-Hastings said the price rise shows that the anti-inflation program is no more effective today than it has been for the last three years.

He said the government can not control inflation without the co-operation of organized labor. He called on Prime Minister Trudeau to meet labor leaders to find a way to control inflation.

The facts of the matter, according to DBS; The index, based on 1961 consumer prices equalling 100, rose to 130.5 in July from 129.9 in June and 126.4 in July last year.

UP 3.2 PER CENT

In the 12-month period, there was an increase of 3.2 per cent, a figure also recorded for the June-June period. This amounts to a deceleration from the 4.6-per-cent increases in the years ended in January and March. The difference is even more marked than the five-per-cent rise in the 12-month period ended in February.

In any case the 3.2-per-cent figure was enough to prompt Mr. Basford to note that it was the lowest year-to-year increase since May, 1967.

"Our success in now getting the cost of living index under better control shows the worth of the government's policy with all the criticism of the last two years," he added.

"Without continued restraint in price and wage policies we could, however, set off the whole inflationary spiral again.

"It therefore remains essential that businesses and trade unions refrain from making inflationary demands on the economy."

Meanwhile, finance department sources said the rise in non-food retail prices has slowed markedly. The forecast is that non-food retail prices should rise by about 1.6 per cent for the year.

HOUSING FACTOR

Back to the index, food and housing costs contributed to the half-per-cent July rise. The housing increase, however, was mainly due to high mortgage rates which may now be declining. Food prices usually come down in August as fresh food crops become available.

Housing costs, which account for nearly a third of the total index, were five per cent higher in July than the same month last year.

July was the fifth consecutive month that food prices registered smaller increases than in the corresponding period a year ago. The figure was 1.2 per cent in this year's January-July period and three per cent in the first half of 1969.

The rise in the cost of food served at home was about the same in the first half of this year as last. Restaurant prices were the big culprit in the latest food index increase.

Overall, the index has now risen 30 per cent above the 1961 base level. On the basis of the old, discarded 1949 level equalling 100, the index would now be at 168.6.

53-YEAR STOMACH-ACHE ENDS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 62-year-old man who complained of stomach trouble most of his life underwent abdominal surgery this week. Doctors removed two pennies and a large fruit seed from the small intestines.

From his hospital bed, Curtis Kastler recalled Thursday he swallowed the pennies 53 years ago.

"I was rolling pennies down my forehead—and they rolled on down."

The pennies, now paper-thin, were worn to about half their normal size by stomach acids.

Kastler doesn't remember swallowing the seed.

Capital Move To Winnipeg 'Money-Saver'

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Supply Minister James Richardson is receiving support from an odd assortment of sources for his suggestion that some federal institutions be moved to Winnipeg from Ottawa.

Mr. Richardson confined his suggestion to the mint.

Then the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism suggested that if Ottawa City Hall did not make some concessions to French-speaking Ottawans the federal government should move federal departments elsewhere, such as to St. Boniface, next door to Winnipeg.

Now Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia suggests that the whole capital be moved to Winnipeg. Winnipeg, he says, is central and land is cheaper there.

The assessed value of Parliament Hill is more than $20 million. The land alone is assessed at $2,373,700—and that excludes the choicest bit of all, the lawns in front of the Peace Tower.

The Centre Block of the Parliament Buildings is assessed at $13,434,725 by the city; the West Block at $1,992,425; the East Block at $1,232,825; the parliamentary library at $1,046,000; and the Peace Tower at $415,250.

Bilingualism is making it slowly across the Rockies, but it appears winded from the long climb.

In the mountain national parks, nearly all the signs now are bilingual except for one that warns that "feeding bears is unlawful and dangerous."

It is in English only.

Keith Spicer, commissioner of official languages, says he will investigate.

Two of the five full-time officers in Mr. Spicer's new department came from the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Senator Paul Martin, government leader in the Senate, received an unannounced raise of $7,000 annually last year.

Previously, his cabinet post paid $10,000. The government reclassified the job so that it now pays the standard of a full cabinet post: $15,000 and a $2,000 car allowance.

With his senatorial salary, Senator Martin now gets $32,000 a year instead of the previous $25,000.

There is talk that Solicitor-General George McIlraith, an MP for 30 years, may retire from parliamentary life when the next election comes around.

If he does leave, his Ottawa Centre seat will in all likelihood be sought by Don Reid, former mayor of Ottawa.

Holiday Ends Tension In Manitoba House

WINNIPEG (CP) — Members of the Manitoba legislature start belated summer holidays today after a 103-day session of tension and bitterness.

The minority New Democratic Party government took its compulsory automobile insurance legislation over the final hurdles Thursday, assisted in the voting by two independent members who backed the NDP after Premier Ed Schreyer modified the legislation.

Then Lt.-Gov. Richard S. Bowles gave the bill royal assent and prorogued the 57-member house at 5:15 p.m.

Throughout the last two months of tumultuous debate on the auto insurance bill, the government was always within a vote or two of being defeated and forced to a general election.

At prorogation the house standing was 28 New Democrats, 22 Conservatives, four Liberals, one Social Credit, one Independent Liberal and one independent.

Some of the Progressive Conservative opposition members wore black ribbons on their lapels, a gesture of mourning for the death of the province's auto insurance industry.

Despite the bitterness of the auto insurance fight, the premier noted 144 bills had been passed and called this a definite accomplishment.

MINISTER SUSPENDED

For the first time in Canada, a cabinet minister was suspended from a provincial assembly.

Tough-talking Transportation Minister Joe Borowski was temporarily suspended during a morning sitting two weeks ago for linking some opposition members with alleged highway scandals during the Conservative administration that was defeated in last summer's election.

The insurance plan could not take effect until after June 30, 1971, because of the government's compromise amendments.

And there is still a chance the plan could die before the first policy is issued.

Liberal-Democrat Larry Desjardins, a member of the NDP caucus who voted with the government on the bill, told the house Wednesday he would resign when the session ended because of abuse that was heaped on him and his family for his position on the legislation.

WOULD BE KEY MAN

Should Mr. Desjardins resign his St. Boniface seat, the election of a Conservative or Liberal in a byelection would leave the government relying on the continued support of Gordon Beard (Ind.—Churchill) in order to achieve even a tie vote in the legislature.

If the government was defeated in the house and then in a general election, the insuranc plan would probably not come in.

As well, Harley B. Vannan, western advisory committee chairman for the Insurance Bureau of Canada, said Thursday there is a possibility the legislation will be tested in the Supreme Court of Canada.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Paul's Four Pace Lacrosse Leaders

NEW WESTMINSTER — Paul Parnell blasted four goals Thursday night and provided assistance on three others to pace league-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies to a 16-12 victory over Vancouver Burrards in a Western Lacrosse Association contest.

Brothers Wayne and Ed Goss and junior Tracy Wright each added three goals while Ray Bennie scored twice and Al Lewthwaite had a singele for 'Bellies.

For Vancouver, Gord Frederickson and Ross McDonald each scored three goals. Brian Davidson (2), Bill Rawson (2), Brian Ansley and Art Dickinson completed scoring for the visitors.

Vancouver had tied the score 6-6 early in the second period but Salmonbellies came through with three goals in one minute and 11 seconds to pull away.

JOCKEYS SEEK HIGHER FEES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Argument over a demand by Exhibition Park jockeys for higher riding fees was postponed Thursday.

Jack Diamond, co-chairman of the British Columbia Jockey Club, proposed that decisions be delayed until after election of officers by the Horsemen's Association, Aug. 28-29. Both sides agreed.

The jockeys seek 10 per cent of the winning purse, about $100, instead of the present $47 in a minimum purse race. They seek slight increases, to $35, $30 and $25, for second, third and fourth spots.

Ron Ellis Signs Two-Year Pact

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Ellis, last season's leading scorer for Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, has signed a two-year contract with the Eastern Division club.

Ellis, who had 35 goals, was the third Leaf to sign. Jacques Plante signed last June when obtained from St. Louis Blues and Norm Ullman is entering the second year of a three-year contract.

Centralia Ruths $till Undefeated

CENTRALIA, Wash. (AP — Centralia was the only unbeaten team remaining in the Pacific Northwest Babe Ruth baseball tourney Thursday after downing Lake Oswego, Ore., 6-5, in eight innings.

Anchorage, Alaska, beat Idaho 7-6, also using an extra frame.

Nanaimo, idle Thursday, faced Alaska today and the winner meets Oregon.

Kranepool Recalled

NEW YORK (AP — Ed Kranepool has been recalled by New York Mets of the National League to replace first baseman-outfielder Mike Jorgensen who is leaving for two weeks of summer camp with the Marines. Kranepool was sent to Tidewater of the International League in June.

WHALLEY CLUB GAINS FINAL

STONEY CREEK, Ont. (CP) — John Cole, 14, tossed a two-hitter Thursday as Whalley, B.C. defeated Edmonton 5-0 and moved into the final for the Canadian senior Little League baseball championship.

Whalley meets undefeated Windsor, Ont., in the final. Windsor has two chances at the title since they are the only undefeated team in the double-knockout tournament.

Should Windsor lose in today's game, a third game will be played Saturday.

Champ Keeps Slender Lead

TORONTO (CP)—Marlene Stewart Streit, gunning for her third straight Canadian women's open golf championship, heads into the final 18 holes today with a one stroke lead.

The Fonthill, Ont., belter, who has already won the title 10 times, soared to a 76 Thursday with rounds of 39-37, giving her a 54-hole score of 222 over the rain-swept 6,020-yard Oakland Golf and Country Club layout.

In second place are Gail Moore of New Westminster, B.C., who trailed Mrs. Streit by a stroke going into Thursday's round, and Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., who came in with a 74, one over par.

Miss Bourassa's 74 shared the best round of the day with Gayle Borthwick of Mississauga, Ont., alone in fourth place at 226.

PALMER FOUR BACK

Betty Cole of Edmonton and Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver were another four strokes back in the competition for the Duchess of Connaught Gold Cup, each with 230.

Holly Botham, winner of the Canadian junior women's championship at Oak Ridges, Ont., last week, was back of the leaders but in respectable position.

Her 81 raised her three-day score to 245.

RAIN CAUGHT HALF

Half the field of 65 players had completed 18-holes before play was halted because of the rain and lightning, and half had completed at least nine holes.

The delay and the rain on the course did not appear to give the leaders much difficulty.

Dale Shaw of Victoria, who had rounds of 92 and 91 for 183, was one of the 60 contestants who failed to survive Wednesday's cutoff figure of 172 strokes.

Gorge Crew Gets Two Title Shots

Gorge Hotel gets two chances Monday night to wrap up the regular-season title of the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League.

The Hotelmen climbed within one triumph of clinching a first-place finish when they thumped Imperial Essos 7-1 Thursday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Monday night they go to post twice on the same diamond, meeting second-place Transport Workers to complete two tie games that were not completed earlier in the season. A win in either contest would give Gorge the title.

George Brice, who pitched a three-hitter and struck out six batters, and Wayne Peters with a fifth inning, bases-loaded triple, were the key men in the Gorge triumph over Essos.

AROUND OUR SHORES

How Far Can Our Hospitality Stretch?

By PAT DUFOUR

There's a warning parallel between the behavior of the huge Russian draggers that overfish our waters and menace our trollers and a portion of the impressive fleet of American pleasure boats that invade our waters each summer.

This year's fleet is larger than ever. American boats clearing customs at Bedwell Harbor is already six per cent higher than the number that entered Canada there a year ago. It's a similar story at other centres.

And, as the invasion grows so does the unreasonable pillaging of our resources.

Most of us boating buffs enjoy a good feed of oysters, crabs or clams when the opportunity presents itself. None of us would deny such treats to our visitors.

But the warning bell rings when you see this sea food being scooped from rocks and beaches in such quantities that it would take a shipload of Goliaths to down it!

You wonder how long this can go on without payment through vanished stocks when you see the residue — long since dead — being dumped back by satiated feasters.

* * *

The sensitivity of Canadian hosts is stretched to breaking point when they see visitors sweating over canning equipment, stashing away supplies to take back to their country, oblivious to the beauty that draws most people to take to the sea.

A fellow boater tells me that one of the visiting canners boasted to him that he could get a good price for his products when he reached home — especially if salmon was on the menu!

* * *

A total disregard for seamen's respect for those in trouble was shown by several boaters during the hours a May Day was in effect after the collision of the B.C. ferry Queen of Victoria and the Russian freighter Sergey Yesenin in Active Pass. In spite of repeated warnings to clear the air, the emergency frequency was jammed with casual calls and conversations, most of them originating from boats with Washington call numbers.

* * *

It is becoming increasingly difficult for local boats to find space at marina resorts on our islands. They find themselves greatly outnumbered by the Americans, and often forced to anchor out.

Some feel strongly that it's time visitors were charged extra fees and, strangely enough, some Americans agree.

These are the ones who appreciate the reasonable rates of most Canadian marinas. After paying $20 for the privilege of tying up at their own Rosario resort on Orcas Island, 10 cents-a-foot wharfage seems a small price to pay for the facilities and friendliness they find in the Gulf Islands.

The friendliness may cool if our resources and way of life are completely lost to those who cross our borders.

* * *

The last of this season's around-Discovery Island races, open to all Royal Vic. boats except cruising class yachts, was held Sunday with Bob Grundison's Owl going over the finish line first.

After him were Bruce Smith's Fireball, Bruce Kenning's Fireball, John Malleson's Sunday, Dave Carere's Chinook, Sid Halls' Wild One, Walter Roots' Enterprise, Norm Marcus' Ahoo-Ya, Dave Gair's Skoal, Mike Fraser's Windless, Dick Readshaw's Massilia, Don North's Pegasus, J. W. Nelson's Glass Slipper. Brian Saunders' Impulse failed to finish.

Grundison had to settle for second spot when Thunderbirds sailed the first of a four-race series Wednesday at Cadboro Bay, being beaten out by Malleson.

Finishing behind them were Dave Anstey in Ahoo-Ya, Chinook, Archie Campbell's Ligero, Steve Merriman's Geronimo, Gordie Nickells' Redskin, Walter Boyes' Baht'at, Doug Harrison's Tambua and Don Twine's Figaro,

Other results were:

CRUSING CLASS — 1. George Dufour's Galenala II.

CAL 20s — 1. Jerry Boone's Red Baron; 2. Massilia; 3. Pegasus; 4. Ted Trenholme's Short Circuit; 5. Ken Kidd's Por Gusto.

X CLASS DINGHIES — 1. Doug Gray's Wayfarer; 2. Bill Van Cuylenborg's Wayfarer; 3. Walter Roots' Enterprise.

PHRF — 1. Skoal; 2. Cliff Woodcock's Cambria; 3. Wild One; 4. Tom Loney's Hammerhead; 5. Glass Slipper.

Juniors Extend Series

Cablevision Juniors extended the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League playoff final by defeating Vicettes 7-4 Thursday night at Central Park.

Thursday's game was a re-play of the opening game of the best-of-three series which Vicettes won 5-4 and then Cablevision protested.

The protest on a rule interpretation was upheld, forcing Thursday's tussle, which enabled the juniors to tie the series at 1-1.

Look world, I can parallel park

Let's not beat around the block, parallel parking is one of the worst things about driving.

If you can do that you can do anything. And a sure way to succeed is with a Datsun 1600.

A Datsun 1600 will make it where a big car can't. Because a big car's wheels may slip over the curb. Or a fin won't fit. Until, red-faced and humiliated, with all the traffic piling up behind you, you have to give up.

You see, a Datsun 1600 is so compact it fits in places bigger cars fear to tread. So easy to see out of, it's almost like being outside. (Even if you are a foot from the curb, it's still in line with other cars.) And you can park a lot too because Datsun 1600 gives you up to thirty-five miles per gallon of gas.

The 1600 also comes with a three-speed automatic transmission, so everything you do driving can look twice as nice. Automatically. Datsun 1600. There's a place for it.

Evenson Runs For Three; Leos Gain Tie For Second

EDMONTON (CP)—British Columbia Lions took advantage of a hot hand, Jim Evenson's rushing, and four interceptions to crush Edmonton Eskimos 35-7 in a Western Football Conference game Thursday night.

"We didn't spot any weaknesses . . . we were up . . . had a hot hand and played real well," B.C. coach Jackie Parker said after the game as the Lions moved into a second-place tie with Calgary Stampeders.

Evenson collected 147 yards rushing on 23 carries and scored three touchdowns to bring his season total to five, good enough for third place in WFC scoring with 30 points.

The Lions' running game, with the help of halfback A. D. Whitfield and Jim Young, plowed through the middle of the Edmonton line for 259 yards rushing against 97 yards passing.

Edmonton coach Ray Jauch, while not criticizing his defence, said "They licked us up front," meaning the Lions overpowered the Eskimos' offensive and defensive front lines in front of 18,992 fans.

TAKES PASS TO SCORE

Rhome Nixon also scored a B.C. touchdown on a 30-yard pass from Carroll Williams, while Ted Gerela booted two field goals, four converts and a 48-yard single.

Mike Eben, a recent acquisition from Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference scored Edmonton's lone touchdown on a six-yard run midway through the second quarter. Dave Cutler added a convert.

The Lions led 8-0 after the first quarter, 15-7 at the half and 25-7 at the end of the third quarter.

ROUGHIES IN FRONT

The Lions and Calgary Stampeders each have four points. Saskatchewan Roughriders lead the league with eight points on a 4-0 record.

Edmonton quarterbacks Don Trull and Rusty Clark gave inconsistent performances for the third successive game. B.C. intercepted three of Trull's passes, including one by Jerry Bradley which led to a key touchdown early in the third quarter, giving the Lions a 21-7 lead.

Trull and Clark have given up 12 interceptions so far this season, 17 short of Edmonton's total for the entire 1969 season.

PULL DOWN PASSES

Bradley made two interceptions, his third and fourth of the season, while Greg Findlay and George Juggum hauled in the others.

Edmonton stuck, for most of the game, to the pass attack Jauch said they would employ this season. However, they gained only 150 yards through the air, most of it in the fourth quarter when Clark took over from Trull.

Edmonton got 40 yards along the ground for a total of 78 yards on rushing in three games.

BROTHERS SHARP

The Lions had 21 first downs to 11 for the Eskimos who defeated B.C. 37-19 in an exhibition game in July.

Clark completed 10 of 18 passes for 105 yards and Trull was good on six of 15 for 45 yards. B.C. quarterback Paul Brothers gave one of his sharpest performances of the season, hitting four receivers on 10 attempts for 57 yards.

Williams, who replaced Brothers late in the fourth quarter, completed two attempts for 40 yards.

PAUL BROTHERS
. . . sharp display

BILL WALKER

Sorry about that, but it has been firmly suggested that now wouldn't be as good a time as any to say that the B.C. Lions will have a secret device at work in Empire Stadium on Thursday night next.

This is a reasonable enough, request, because apparently the gadget hasn't been approved yet, and the sponsors of the project don't want discussion on the matter while it is before the commissioners of the Canadian Football League.

All of which is a gentle way of saying that the new instant replay screen which has been constructed and is situated high above the south end of Empire Stadium has not yet been approved by the league. subject is a "no-no", just as is the possibility that the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League will have a similar device, that New York is looking into the matter, as well, and that the Houston Astrodome has been considered as another future home for yet another technological breakthrough.

Of course, in time, it could be everywhere, particularly where sports are played, because that's the name of the game.

"Instant replay."

And without violating any confidences, it is safe to say that the on-site instant replay screen at Empire Stadium measures 15' by 20', and is a part of a bigger projection overall which encompasses a brand new scoreboard.

The scoreboard will be in use on Thursday, and it is hoped, in working order, something the old one wasn't in the league opener. The Lions did score nine points against Saskatchewan that night, but the lights wouldn't go on to prove it.

●

However, any on-site replay must be considered an honest effort to give the game patron the same advantages that previously were the sole right of the home viewer. Because the living-room lounger enjoyed a built-in benefit. He could grab a beer and not miss a bit of the action. When he returned he could see it all, even in stop action.

Under the new gimmickery being planned, the exact same privileges will go to the Stadium fan. The big play will be played back. It won't matter if the fan went for a coffee, or spilled mustard on his best suit. He, too, can now get to see it all over again.

That is if it ties in with the thoughts of the TV producer. The hook-up is there. The plays are at his discretion, but it's also likely that he'll now be told what he can show, and what he can't.

Which is probably the hold-up with the league.

Because, it has been called a new invasion of the rights of the competitors, if not the officials.

Sure, even the players could sneak a look, and see what went wrong, provided of course the replay didn't run into the next play. It has happened on TV. That could be a little treacherous. Imagine a player looking up for an instant, and then down just in time to see the opposing lineman barrelling in on the next play. Of course, the Lions could probably use this to advantage. They could play going north all the time and that would put the opposition looking into the screen.

It could be likened to the old "give 'em the sun routine," because certainly no player would want to miss any part of the action, especially if it was right in front of him.

Then bango! The Lions are off and running.

●

The hockey replay is a better avenue, it is said, because of controlled lighting. In other words, it's easier to do indoors than outside in the rain, and fog (now, there's a thought—how would it work in the fog?)

At any rate, it all involves split screen techniques, and mirrors. The hockey screen would be four-sided and would presumably fit over the clock. What would happen to the clock is not certain, but presumably the engineers have that in hand as well.

But as of now, the two specific areas are Empire Stadium and the Coliseum, because there is a contractual arrangement whereby tentative approval has been granted in return for certain concessions. But that's only if the sports agree. Then, and only then, will Vancouver become a pilot project for the future. The promoters could then go to other people and say.

"Look what we've got, and it works, too."

But then it's not official yet.

And won't be until game officials agree they are right all the time, or almost all the time.

Which is the way it is on TV now.

But in front of 30,000 screaming fans!

Hockey referee Lloyd Gilmour was recently quoted:

"Can you imagine blowing one in Boston . . . and having the replay show your goof in slow motion.

"That could shake a guy up."

Cahill Lauds Argo Defence

TORONTO (CP)—Coach Leo Cahill has what he calls compatible quarterbacks. When one grinds to a halt, the other takes over.

Tom Wilkinson started for Toronto Argonauts in Thursday night's Eastern Football Conference game with Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Don Jonas took over in the second quarter.

Jonas gave the Argos two touchdown passes, then Wilkinson returned to set up another touchdown before Jonas hit with his third scoring pass.

The Argo defence, meanwhile, kept Hamilton at a virtual standstill for a 29-3 victory—the first Argo win against one loss. The Ticats now have a win and two losses.

"I said before the game we'd try something new and switch the quarterbacks back and forth with no set plan," said Cahill.

After Wilkinson's early inability to generate an offence, Jonas scored on his first play with a 60-yard pass-and-run play to halfback Dave Raimey.

Linebacker Mike Blum stopped Hamilton's first play after the kickoff when he intercepted a Joe Zuger pass and Jonas took just four more plays before connecting on a 11-yard pass to flanker Tom Bland in the end zone.

PRAISES DEFENCE

Cahill said the game before 33,135 fans was "a great tribute to the defensive coaches."

"We knew them better than they knew themselves," he said of the Hamilton offence which stalled when Zuger was thrown for several losses and had numerous passes knocked down by Argo defenders.

Jonas was the passing leader with 10 completions in 16 throws for 180 yards. Wilkinson completed six of nine pass attempts for 138 yards while Zuger gained 138 yards for the Ticats on 11 of 22 passes completed.

Bosman's One-Hit Gem Keeps Twins on Skids

Oakland Loses Chance to Gain; McDowell Wins

By The Associated Press

Dick Bosman gave up drag racing in favor of throwing a speeding baseball much to the regret of the skidding Minnesota Twins.

The hard-throwing Washington Senators right-hander mowed down the Twins on a bunt single — Cesar Tovar's lead-off hit — in handing the Western Division leaders their sixth loss in succession Thursday night, a 1-0 shutout. Minnesota's once-comfortable lead now is five games over Oakland Athletics. The A's lost 4-3 to Cleveland Indians.

Bosman, a husky 6-foot-3, 210-pounder, issued a walk to opposing pitcher Jim Kaat in the sixth, after retiring 6 straight Twins, then got Tovar on a double play bouncer before retiring Minnesota the rest of the way, facing only 28 batters, one over the minimum.

Bosman, 12-8 currently, was 14-5 last year with an American League leading ERA of 2.15.

SINGLE DID IT

Bosman, lowering his 1970 ERA to 3.02, got the only run he needed in the first inning when Wayne Comer bunted for a single and went to third on Harmon Killebrew's wild throw. Rick Reichart's grounder got the run in, sending Kaat, who issued only five hits, to his ninth loss against 10 triumphs.

In other AL games, California Angels nipped Baltimore Orioles 3-2, Milwaukee Brewers edged Detroit Tigers 3-2, Kansas City Royals slugged Boston 11-3 and the New York Yankees topped Chicago White Sox 4-3.

Sam McDowell, 17-7, struck out nine and gave up three hits in stopping the A's winning streak at five games.

The left-hander was touched for the three runs all unearned, in the third on Tommy Davis' two-out bases-loaded double. Davis got to bat when Cleveland's Duke Sims dropped a foul fly off the bat of Blue Moon Odom, who eventually walked.

Vada Pinson homered for the Indians in the first and Cleveland won it in the fifth with three runs. Craig Nettles and Roy Foster had run-scoring hits and another came in on a wild pitch.

40TH HOME RUN

In the National League, catcher Johnny Bench smacked his 40th home run of the season to help pace Cincinnati Reds to a 6-1 triumph over New York Mets.

Other NL games say Houston Astros surprise Philadelphia Phillies 4-3, San Diego Padres outlast St. Louis Cardinals 9-7, Atlanta Braves top Montreal Expos 4-1, and, in an afternoon contest, the Chicago Cubs beat San Francisco Giants, 6-3.

Birds in Pairs Help Nicklaus

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, bagging birdies by the pair, stormed in with a two-under-par 68 Thursday and tied John Miller for the first-round lead in the PGA National Championship.

Charles Coody and Larry Hinson followed at 69 and were the only other players in the select field able to break par on the sun-seared Southern Hills Country Club course, a 6962-yard layout.

WRONG CLUB

"I played all right," said Nicklaus, the pre-tourney favorite and currently the hottest player on the tour. "I hit the ball extremely well. I played the wrong club once and that cost me two strokes."

That was on the par-three sixth on which he went two over.

But Jack, the reigning British Open champion who hasn't finished worse than second in his last four tournaments, got that back with birdies on 10 and 11, then closed with birdies at 16 and 17.

Arnold Palmer, the 40-year-old athlete of the decade who is seeking the one major title that has eluded him, was in contention at 70, but some of the other great names of the game had their difficulties in the strength-sapping heat.

TREVINO, CASPER AT 72

Lee Trevino had a 72. So did Masters champion Billy Casper, U.S. Open champion Tony Jacklin and South African Gary Player stumbled in with 74s.

Defending champion Ray Floyd took a 71, then went hustling off in a search of an official to make a complaint.

Floyd said that on the landing area for the par-four fourth hole, "divots had been filled in with piles of red sand."

It's all over out there. It looks like an animal has been there."

Palmer headed a big group at 70 that included 57-year-old Sam Snead, Homero Blancas, Dave Stockton, Jacky Cupit and New Jersey club pro Dick Hendrickson.

Miller is a 23-year-old tour sophomore from San Francisco, competing in his first PGA and looking for his first professional triumph.

He had three over-par holes and five birdies.

Nicklaus, on a hot streak that has won him $66,500 in his last four tournaments, had five birdies.

Gonzales Blasts Rival, Linesmen

TORONTO (CP)—Pancho Gonzales, the old lion of the tennis court, stalked his way through three match points and what he termed bad calls by a linesman Thursday to advance to today's quarter-finals of the $23,000 Canadian open tennis tournament.

Gonzales erupted in the second set of his match against Ron Holmberg when a linesman called service faults. But he managed to curb his temper when the pressure was on to beat his doubles partner 6-4, 4-6, 8-6.

In other matches, top-seeded Rod Laver of Australia defeated countryman Bill Bowrey 6-3, 6-1; Marty Reissen of Evanston, Ill., got past Ismail El Shafei of the United Arab Republic 6-3, 1-6, 6-2 and Cliff Drysdale of South Africa upset third-seeded Roy Emerson of Australia 8-6, 6-2.

Keith Carpenter of Toronto was dumped 6-1, 6-3 by Aussie Fred Stolle.

The fiery Gonzales, who scored several winners with his overhead smash in the first set, smouldered in the 10th game of the second set when, trailing 5-4 in games and leading 40-15, a linesman called a fault on his serve.

The colorful Los Angeles native lost the point, and when he faulted at deuce he yelled at the linesman: "That's a fault, the other was on the line."

After he lost the point, he smashed one of the balls being returned to his end of the court at the wall behind him, causing a linesman to flinch, and drove a second ball at the linesman who made the call.

Holmberg, of Highland Falls, N.Y., then broke Gonzales' service to force a deciding set.

Bakers Lose First Game

Victoria McDonald's Bread fell victim to third-place finishers Nanaimo City, 12-8, at Memorial Arena Thursday in the first game of a best-of-three semi-final series in the Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League.

Pacing the victory were Mike Good, who netted a total of seven points, and Leigh Jeffs. Both players scored three goals.

Bakers, who finished second in league play, received two-goal performances from Pat Green and Muzz Bryant.

Nanaimo will host the second game of the semi-final Saturday.

Repeat Win for Sneva

LANGLEY — Tom Sneva of Spokane won his second, and perhaps last, 100-lap main event in the five-race International Drivers' Challenge series for unlimited modifieds and sprint cars here Thursday night.

Sneva, who won the opening race at Victoria's Western Speedway on Wednesday, might have to miss the remainder of the series because of commitments to the Canadian-American Modified Racing Association.

This places Roy Smith of Victoria, who finished second behind Sneva in both races, in a favorable position to grab the over-all points championship.

Sneva took the lead on the 18th lap Thursday and led the rest of the way to pocket another $1,000.

The Spokane driver also collected fast time money of $100 by turning the ⅝-mile track in a record time of 14:42 seconds.

Frank Weiss of Calgary, who placed third in the main, won the lone trophy dash. Seattle drivers John Tharp and Vern Church won the "B" and "C" main evints, respectively.

The series continues tonight at Bellingham and winds up Saturday and Sunday at Monroe, Wash.

OUTDOOR REPORT

Bowhunters Seek Quality

Pursuit of big game with a bow brings to many hunters a type of intangible satisfaction that cannot be gained through the use of a rifle.

Mainly it is the quality of the sporting experience, rather than the quantity of success, which attracts participants to bowhunting.

Because of the restricted range in which the bow is an effective killer (usually within 40 yards), the bowhunter must exercise a greater degree of skill in woodcraft than his rifle-toting counterpart.

Infinite patience and far-reaching powers of observation are assets he has to cultivate in himself.

For example, the bowhunter stalking his quarry must constantly be aware of wind direction, the position of possible noise-makers underfoot as well as the location of branches between himself and the hunted animal.

Even the tiniest twig can deflect an arrow in flight although the "punch" packed by a broadhead is not to be underestimated. One hunter in a deer camp was reported to have used a 46-pound bow to drive a broadhead through a steel oil drum— just to see if it was possible.

Not that conduct of this sort is to be condoned, but it aptly illustrates the stopping power of the weapon.

On Vancouver Island there is a bows-only season on buck deer from Aug. 29 to Sept. 4 and bowhunters can also risk their necks with the multitudes of rifle hunters during the remainder of the season.

Fish and game branch regulation governing the use of bow and arrow for hunting state that the bow must have a pull, fully drawn, of greater than 40 pounds, "and the arrow must be a broadhead of ⅞ inch or greater (for game animals) at the widest point."

For those who want to combine bowhunting with a little competition, the B.C. Archery Association is sponsoring a bowhunt during the "special" season over all of Vancouver Island.

* * *

Trophies for the largest buck, largest bear or most grouse will be awarded as well as some hidden weight prizes.

Headquarters for the hunt will be at Vernon Lake in the Nimpkish Valley. Evan Charles, bowhunting chairman of the BCAA will be camped there to "measure antlers, count grouse and give advice to all novice bowhunters."

Other checking stations for the competition are Harbour Park Mall, Barsby Wildlife Centre, Nanaimo, and Alex Oneschuck at the Glanford Esso Station on Glanford Avenue in Victoria.

Entry forms and additional information is available from E. Doug Wood, 4709 William Head Road, R.R. No. 1, Victoria.

* * *

POT SHOTS: Wood has a few tips for the novice bowhunter . . . carry at least one extra bowstring, in case a broadhead cuts one while getting off a shot . . . extra bowstrings may be taped to the bow for convenience . . . never carry an arrow in the bow unless you are about to shoot . . . one stumble resulting in a wound from the broadhead could be fatal . . . carry a small tube of waterproof glue to replace feathers that might have worked loose against the brush . . . and, as in hunting with a rifle, make sure of your shot.

Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association will stage the annual Vancouver Island Shooting League trap championships Sunday starting at 9 a.m. at the Goldstream layout . . . a merchandise trap shoot, starting at 4 p.m. Saturday, will be held on the same grounds.

* * *

NIBBLES: Salmon fishermen may idp lines almost anywhere around Vancouver Island with good chances of success . . . best areas for tyee-sized springs are Muchalat Inlet, Campbell River's Tyee Pool and Nahmint Bay . . . Ross Spiers boated a 57-pounder in the Tyee Pool on Tuesday . . . hottest spots for coho include Duncan Bay, Comox Bar, Cape Lazo, Norris Rocks and Northwest Bay.

E. Jarvis won the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association monthly trophy for July with a 17-pounder while Mrs. J. Birch boated a 9:02 pound salmon to capture the distaff trophy . . . hidden weight winners were Vic Holman, Jim Leggett, J. F. Swanston and L. Mahaffey.

Givan Faces Bill Thompson In Golf Final

Husky Bill Thompson of Victoria and Seattle fairway slicker Harry Givan clashed today for the championship of the 48th annual Seniors' Northwest Golf Association tournament today after cruising to victoriea Friday with less difficulty than had been predicted.

Playing on his home Victoria Golf Club links, Thompson downed Bruce Short of Seattle by a 5-and-4 count while Givan, bidding for his third consecutive crown, turned back an old rival, Victoria's George Bigelow, by the same score.

Another Victorian was shooting for a victory in one of today;s five flight finals as Gordon Verley tackled Don Seaburg of Seattle for the "D" flight title.

Jack Edgell of Vancouver boosted the number of Canadians in the finals. He faced 1963 "C" winner Bob Littler of Seattle in the "A" final.

Hyslop Second In Yacht Series

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — David Croshers of Santa Monica, Calif., was an easy winner in the North American Flying Dutchman yacht championships, which ended Wednesday.

Peter Hyslop of Vancouver, B.C., was skipper of the second place boat in the final standings. He won Wednesday's final race.

Texan Leads In Tight Fit

OTTAWA (CP)—Texan John Mahaffey played it calm and cool Thursday to take the half-way lead at the Canadian amateur golf chmpionship.

The 22-year-old San Antonio swinger came in with his second straight 69, four under par, for an eight-under total of 138 after 36 holes.

But behind him the field is closely bunched.

Allen Miller of Pensacola, Fla., the first-round leader with a 66, sagged to an even-par 73 Thursday but the 139 was good enough for second place.

Doug Roxburgh, the Vancouver 18-year-old, was 72 Thursday after an opening 68 and bunched in a tie for third at 140 with Don Klenk of Medinah, Ill., and Robert Zender of Skokie, Ill.

Former amateur champs Keith Alexander of Calgary and Gary Cowan of Kitchener were in a five-player group at 141 with Stu Hamilton of Brampton, Ont., Dan Talbot of Beloeil, Que., and Dick Siderowf of Easton, Conn.

There was no repetition of the belting the top golfers in the 167-man field handed the 6,714-yard Ottawa Hunt and Golf Club course in the opening round. Both pin and tee placements were tougher Thursday and the wind, just about non-existent Wednesday, was blowing into the golfers' faces on just about every long hole.

COMPETITION TOUGH

But the calibre of the field gathered for the 66th national amateur, the best ever in the view of Royal Canadian Golf Association officials, showed up as well. It took a 149 score to stay alive as the competition was cut to 66 golfers and such perennials as Nick Weslock of Brantford, Ont., a four-time winner, and John Johnston of Vancouver, the 1959 champ, didn't make it.

Mahaffey, who just graduated this spring after majoring in psychology but says "it doesn't work on the course," had his driver and putter both going well. "I don't think I missed a fairway."

He had a bobble or two with the wedge but the putter was as hot as the 86-degree weather. The Texan, on the tournament trail every week but one since finishing school in June and who expects eventually to turn pro, plunked in a 40-footer on the 12th hole and a lovely, curling 25-footer on the undulating 17th.

Wayne McDonald of Oakville, Ont., the 1969 champion who was in second place Wednesday with a 67, boomed 10 strokes over that Thursday and wound up tied with six other players at 144.

Neil Crofton of Vancouver made the cutoff at 149, but his Willingdon Cup teammates, Carl Schwantje of Victoria Club and John Russell of Vancouver, didn't. Schwantje had a 77 for a 152 total and Russell a 75 for 152. Johnston finished at 154 and Ross Ellison, also of Vancouver at 152.

Haney Sniper Posts Second Win

SOUTH MARCH, Ont. (CP) — Tricky winds proved no obstacle to Bev Pinney of Haney, B.C., Thursday at the annual Dominion of Canada Rifle Association matches at Connaught Ranges 10 miles west of Ottawa.

Pinney fired a 143—and 20 V-bulls — to win his second match, the Alexander, fired from 800, 900 and 1,000 yards with 10 bullets at each distance.

The V-bull, a small inner bullseye, is useful in event of a tie to determine the winner. The shooter with the most V-bulls wins.

Pinney is the first so far in the meet to win two matches in the eight-day shoot. Wednesday he captured the Letson match with a perfect score.

Two other shooters, Arthur DeBodt of Stellarton, N.S., and Gerry Ouellette of Windsor, Ont., also fired 143s in the breezy match. DeBodt had only 12 V-bulls for second place. Ouellette had 11 V-bulls for third.

Pinney's second win may give him a good chance of winning the match's Grand Aggregate challenge trophy given to the shooter making the highest average score in seven matches.

The two matches he has won, plus another in which he scored 98 of 100 points, count in the Grand Aggregate. But in still another counting match, Pinney shot a low 144, nine points less than the winner.

TWO-SHOT MARGIN . . . IN LEFTY-RIGHTY GOLF

California Pair Leads

Tom James and Charlie Wilks of San Francisco matched par with a best-ball score of 70 Thursday to grab the first-round lead in the third annual lefty-righty golf tournament at Royal Colwood.

Three other pairs were two strokes back.

Runners-up with 72s are Gordon Millin and Ron Howard Sr. of Colwood, Ray Tull and Mike Pyke of Calgary, as well as Jack Keller and Don Ross of Colwood.

Top 12 teams gained berths in the championship section of the three-day, 54-hole competition.

A total of 48 teams from B.C., Alberta, Washington, Oregon and California are competing in the event.

British Horseman Conducts Program

DUNCAN — Michael Herbert, fellow of the British Horse Society and national instructor of the Canadian Combined Training Association, is conducting a training program at Pine Paddocks Equestrian Centre here.

Herbert, 37, who has held the courses from Duncan to Nova Scotia and back again, has just completed a similar course at the Southlands Riding and Polo Club, Vancouver. When this six-day program is completed Sunday he will go to Ottawa.

He has been instructing professionally for the past 18 years.

Herbert said the purpose of the course is two-fold.

"It is to encourage people to participate in this particular sort of competition and I am also looking for promising riders and horses for international and national competitions," he explaned.

The combined training includes dressage, cross-country, stadium jumping and steeplechase.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Stalling Charged on Incinerator Request

LADYSMITH — "An ounce of prevention is worth more than 32,000 ounces of cure" said Mrs. W. J. Cotsford, secretary of Shawnigan Lake Planning Board, as she urged the Cowichan Valley regional board to install a garbage incinerator in Shawnigan lake.

Although Shawnigan Lake area is pressing for the incinerator to serve the Cowichan Valley district, regional directors decided to wait for a petition which would support installation of an incinerator.

* * *

In addition to Shawnigan Lake, the area included Cobble Hill and Mill Bay.

In her letter Mrs. Cotsford said "Two years is a very long time to wait, and the pollution question grows.

"It would appear that there is considerable stalling being done by some areas who seem to be hoping for someone else to handle their chestnuts. Delaying tactics or senseless procrastination will not assist in alleviating the urgency of pollution problems confronting the whole district."

Garbage from southern areas was being added to the already othr areas.

* * *

H. A. Warner of Mill Bay said that it is doubtful whether a vote would be successful in this area because C. W. Disposals is "giving us excellent service now." The garbage is then dumped in the North Cowichan incinerator.

"It took us three years to get the incinerator," said director Don Morton.

Director David Laverock said the incinerator proposed for the southern portion of the region would cost about $30,000.

'Free, But I Don't Feel It'

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Everybody says I'm a free woman," Linda Kasabian said with a sigh, "but I don't feel any different."

Then the state's chief witness in the Sharon Tate murder trial was whisked out a back door of the Hall of Justice Thursday under heavy guard to spend her first night out of jail in eight months.

Mrs. Kasabian's lawyers said she was driven to an undisclosed hotel, anticipating "a good dinner and probably watching television."

She was released after murder-conspiracy charges against her were dropped Thursday. The petite, pigtailed witness was granted immunity from prosecution for telling her story on the stand.

During 14 days as a witness, she has testified that some members of Charles Manson's hippie-style "family" killed the blonde actress and six others during two murder missions last August. She said she went on the missions but stayed outside as a lookout, then fled in terror.

Manson and three women followers, Susan Atkins, 21, Patricia Krenwinkel, 22, and Leslie van Houten, 20, are on trial for murder-conspiracy.

WILL COMMUTE DAILY

Mrs. Kasabian will come to court daily until she completes her testimony. Ronald Hughes, the last of four defence lawyers, completed his cross-examination, and chief prosecutor Aaron Stovitz began questions in redirect examination.

Since her return to Los Angeles last December, Mrs. Kasabian has spent most of her time alone in a cell under heavy guard. Her lawyers say there have been numerous threats on her life.

A prosecutor said that she will remain under guard as long as she's a witness.

Her lawyer, Ronald Goldman, said she hopes to head east. Her mother in Milford, N.H., has been caring for her children, Tanya, 2, and Angel, five months.

Goldman was asked if, in view of her experiences, she could ever really feel free.

"The fact that she has told the truth," he said, "that she gave herself up, and that she has done everything she could for the cause of truth and justice, will give her solace and a sense of freedom."

Earlier Manson, 35, padded barefoot into the courtroom for a hearing with the jury absent. He complained of "unjust and barbaric treatment" in jail and asked for a "cease and desist" order.

Manson, in jail denims, took the witness stand to testify in support of his motions but didn't get the chance. The judge postponed the hearing for a week

N.B. Graveyard 3,000 Years Old

FREDERICTON (CP) — Archaeologists report that an ancient burial ground believed to be more than 3,000 years old has been found in the Grand Lake area of New Brunswick, about 25 miles east of here.

Dr. David Sanger, archaeologist with the National Museum of Man at Ottawa, says: "It could be the biggest find of its type in Eastern Canadian archaeological history."

Dr. Sanger is directing the work of excavating the site, near Cow Point on the northwest side of Grand Lake. Digging began early this month.

He describes it as a "red paint" burial ground because of the liberal amount of red ochre that colors the relics found there. These are said to include arrowheads, sharpening stones and plummets.

About 20 graves are reported to have been uncovered so far. The date of the burials is tentatively estimated at between 1000 and 2000 BC.

The Gleaner says the graves were found about eight years ago by Cecil Denton, a game warden at Scotchtown on the western shore of Grand Lake. Walking through the Cow Point district with his wife, he was attracted by bright red dirt around a two-foot hole chafed by a log in a gravel bank.

Mr. Denton apparently kept his find a secret until a few months ago.

Dr. Sanger said today he feels his time estimate of 1000 to 2000 BC is accurate. He bases it on the type of graves and artifacts found. Carbon tests will not be completed for several months.

MORE VIOLENCE SHOWN

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A survey conducted by a University of Western Ontario sociologist says more violence is shown on national television news in the United States than in Canada.

Dr. Benjamin Singer said Thursday the April 20 - May 10 survey showed "aggression items" constituted 49.5 per cent of the Columbia Broadcasting System's nightly news reports compared with 25.9 per cent on the CBC.

'Custom-Built' Young Vic Boon for Youthful Actors

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — The venerable Old Vic, home of Britain's National Theatre, has given birth to a lusty offspring, the first custom-built theatre in the country for young actors and audiences.

Called, inevitably, the Young Vic, it is a starkly functional playhouse in steel and concrete with wooden bench seats, built on a bomb-site close to the parent theatre in Waterloo Road, south of the Thames.

Part of the site, donated by the Greater London Council, is a ruined butcher's shop, which remains with its green-tiled walls as a somewhat unorthodox entrance lobby.

The 500-seat theatre was built on a shoestring, $150,000 of public money, and is administered by Frank Dunlop, second-in-command at the National to Sir Laurence Olivier.

Some of the National's regular actors will take part in the Young Vic's first offerings, which begin Sept. 11 and include new productions of Oedipus by Sophocles, The Soldier's Tale by Igor Stravinsky, Waiting for Godot by Samuel Beckett and Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew.

In addition to its own productions with National Theatre actors, the Young Vic will be inviting leading youth theatre companies from elsewhere in Britain and abroad. The first guest company will be a group of young Texans who present a multi-media rock musical called Stomp for a six-day run from Sept. 15.

Aim of the new theatre is to provide a varied diet of classical and new plays and what its promoters call "every kind of theatrical experience" for actors and audiences in their teens and early 20s.

"RACISM" was the major cause for the police fusillade at Jackson State University when two black students were killed, William Scranton, chairman of the U.S. commission on campus unrest said Thursday after hearings ended in Jackson, Miss.

Marijuana May Be 'More Serious' Risk

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon met Thursday with representatives of the young lawyers section of the American Bar Association and told them a preliminary government study of marijuana showed it to be a more serious health hazard than some persons have believed.

Thomas D. Cochran, of Independence, Mo., chairman of the bar group, quoted the president's remark.

Deputy press secretary Gerald R. Warren said the presiden's reference was to a National Institute of Mental Health study. The final results are not in, Warren, said, but preliminary evidence shows that "there are some serious medical problems with marijuana."

Cochran said the young lawyers were sponsoring three one-hour assembly sessions in junior high schools on drug abuse.

When the lawyers' group asked the president last year for suggestions on what they might do in the way of public service, he suggested they try to combat the menace of drugs among young people, Cochran reported.

SAYS VISITING PROFESSOR

BNA 'More Vital' Than Tax Plan

A university professor urged British Columbians Thursday to be more concerned with proposed changes to the Canadian constitution now under study and discussion in Ottawa.

Ronald M. Burns, director of the Institute of Intergovernmental Relations and professor of political studies at Queen's University, said constitutional matters should not be "the sole concern of those who temporarily direct our daily lives."

"Governments are not given any mandate to change the nature of the land in which we live," he stated.

Burns felt the constitutional talks were more important than the white paper on taxation which is attracting a good deal of attention.

LONG TIME

"I suggest that the future of this country is even more closely bound up in this exercise on the constitution than taxation," he said. "Taxes change but constitutions are usually with us for a long, long time."

He said Canadians have an opportunity to express their views on the constitution through the recently-appointed joint parliamentary committee on the constitution.

But this was not enough, he said.

"I would hope this would be supplemented by similar committees of the provincial legislatures," he said. "Here is the opportunity for those who have something to say to say it."

He warned if people did not speak up on constitutional matters the consensus of the country would be made up from those who do come forward — the crackpots, the academics and the interested groups, economic and political.

And he added jokingly: "Can I hear someone ask how he will tell them apart?"

Burns, a former deputy of finance for the provincial government, spoke on regionalism and nationalism at the Victoria Rotary Club luncheon at the Empress Hotel.

On the various aspects of regionalism — economic, political and cultural, he said Canada would not be able to continue to operate successfully if conflicting regional demands were not reconciled with the national interest.

"The greatest danger in regional movements is that they may become ends in themselves and not merely the means toward the advancement of the public interest," he stated.

While admitting that conflicting regional problems were not easy to solve, he felt the basic difficulty may be that "our representatives have not really got down to the fundamental question of just what kind of country we want and need."

"It is the old case of not being able to see the forest for the trees," he said. "Perhaps we may be forgiven if we suggest that our leaders should come out of the woods and take a long, careful look at the view."

SALT's Third Round To Resume in Helsinki

VIENNA (Reuters) — After 32 secret sessions, the second round of the strategic arms limitations talks between the United States and Russia ended today and the Russians announced that the third round of discussions will resume in Helsinki, Finland, Nov. 2.

The site and date of the next stage in the talks were announced by chief Soviet negotiator Vladimir Semenov at the last formal session of the Vienna talks.

Semenov said his government would pursue negotiations to obtain agreement on curbing nuclear missiles.

Semenov, speaking at the formal closing ceremony in Vienna's Belvedere Palace, said negotiations with the Americans in Vienna had taken place in a quiet, business like and cordial atmosphere.

During the four months of talks in Vienna "not unimportant" and useful work had been done, he said.

It would be wrong to ignore the complicated nature of the main theme under debate—curbs on the global missile race—and it also would be wrong to underestimate the difficulties which lay ahead, he said.

But the Soviet Union is determined to continue the negotiations in order to achieve the necessary results, the Soviet delegate said.

"Naturally, this will call for efforts on both sides."

The Soviet Union attaches high significance to the task of reaching an accord with the United States because this would have an important influence not only on Washington-Moscow relations but on the strengthening of peace and security on the international level Semenov stressed.

STABILITY IS GOAL

Gerard Smith, chief American negotiator, in a brief statement said "I believe that both sides can agree that important progress has been made."

"The work we have done here in Vienna should provide a sound basis for the next phase of our talks starting on Nov. 2 in Helsinki," he added.

Smith said an agreement between the two powers on missile curbs would enhance international security by maintaining a stable strategic relationship between them.

Limiting strategic arms should assist in reducing the tensions and uncertainties which exist in the world today, he noted.

The Soviet and American chief negotiators this morning signed a joint communique registering their common aim to pursue talks toward agreement.

The same air of factual, nonpolemical approach to the talks which has characterized the SALT talks since they first began in Helsinki last November also was apparent today.

Only once in the Vienna round of discussions did the Russians betray some impatience. This was a month ago when Washington leaked reports indicating first areas of agreement.

The understanding on the talks is that they should be conducted throughout in secrecy, and that there is joint agreement before any information on them is released to the public.

'For Laughs' Dogs Get Marijuana

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal veterinarians say growing numbers of marijuana and hashish users are trying to introduce their pets to the drug scene, not for mind expansion but simply for laughs.

Dr. Hubert Jasmin, who operates a clinic in downtown Montreal, treated a dog last week for an overdose of marijuana.

* * *

"It was just a puppy," he said, "and not more than 10 pounds. Its body temperature was below normal, it was hyperexcited and was running around in circles."

Dr. Jasmin said the puppy's teen-age owner admitted giving marijuana to the animal. He became concerned when effects of the drug had not worn off within a few hours.

* * *

The puppy was treated with a detoxifying agent and cured without permanent after-effects.

Dr. Huge Lubbert told of one puppy which was "high" on hashish after nibbling at one-eighth of an ounce left lying on a table. The dog behaved as if on tranquilizers.

Dr. Lubbert said: "The kids experiment to see what will happen. They just do it for a laugh; they think it is funny."

THE GRAPES ARE COMING
But let's think about it! This year why not do it
THE WINE-ART WAY
There is good reason to give the matter a second thought.
1. In March most of the California regions reported a 50% frost, short supply, higher prices?
2. WINE-ART now has 100% varietal concentrates which will give you top quality wines.
3. Concentrates are more convenient and easier to use. Make it when you're ready.
GRAPE CONCENTRATE
VARIETIES AVAILABLE
Zinfandel—Probably the most popular with fresh grape users.
Ruby Cabernet—Our Number One Red.
Chenin Blanc—The more delicate of California Whites.
French Red—From the Beaujolais region.
Italian Red—Makes a good Chianti.
Spanish Red—Unbeatable for colour.
Spanish White—Fine for Chablis type wines.
Hidalgo Muscatel—An old favourite.
Special Red Blend—A mixture of Zinfandel and Carignane.
Special White Blend—Mostly Tokay with some Palimino.
Also available—Regular California Red and White.
Hidalgo Tintorero and Macabeo in short supply.

DIVORCE MYTHS

A Necessary Evil —Separate Ways

By Jack Scott

If somebody at a party, say, were to point out Marney Stevenson and tell you that she'd broken up more homes than any other woman in Victoria you might wonder how a nice girl like that went astray.

Fact is that Marney is a lawyer, perhaps the busiest in Victoria's divorce courts, herself 20 happy years in the matrimonial ring, mother of two and a woman who looks upon her specialty almost as a necessary evil.

Scott

"Often it's the only way out of an impossible situation," she will tell you, "but every divorce can be described as a defeat of human relations. When it's a defended action it can be an emotional, terrible, heart-breaking thing. I always feel that if I go to court on a defended divorce I've in some way failed."

An attractive, vibrant woman with laser-beam blue eyes, Marney left a lawyer's office as secretary in 1948 and emerged from university seven years later to article in Victoria. In the past five years, though she hadn't planned it this way, her professional life has been a steady round of divorces, separations, working out maintenance arrangements, custody of the children and those other messy results of marriage-on-the-rocks.

"A clientele like this comes mainly from word-of-mouth and because so often people with family problems tend to group together," she explains. "The other night, for instance, I went into the Strathcona for a drink after work. There was a table with six women and a man at it. I suddenly realized that I'd been legally involved in the matrimonial affairs of each of them."

There are, it seems, a surprising number of inaccurate generalities and accepted myths about divorce that amuse or irritate every lawyer in the field.

★ ★ ★

Myth: Victoria is a quiet little backwater of older, contented couples who'd rather fight than switch. ("Nonsense," says Marney. "There's no lawyer in Vancouver any busier than I am in Victoria. On a per capita basis the divorce rate here may be higher than anywhere else in Canada. It is certainly not less."

Myth: Nine out of every 10 divorces are granted to women against men. '("Absolutely false," says Marney. "For every three women who are granted a divorce there are two men. You might imagine that my own clients would be mostly women, perhaps thinking that a woman lawyer would be more sympathetic with their problems, but, in fact, for every woman who walks through that door there's a man.")

Myth: The early years of marriage are the dangerous years and economic problems, wrangling over where the money goes, are the hang-ups that most often cause separation. ("There's only one basic cause for divorce: People," says Marney. "In marriage, every year is the dangerous year. Certainly rushing into it without experience may lead to divorce, but just as significant a group are those of 40 and over. Very often they've been so busy and involved in having kids, getting established and working, that when the kids have grown and gone they look at each other, really look at each other, for the first time in 20 years, and find they can't stand each other.

"As for economic problems, sure, they're often a factor, but today there are as many people in the upper-income brackets getting divorces as in the lower-income brackets. No, the cause is people and the kind of society we're living in today.")

Myth: Women invariably weep at the moment of legal parting, whatever they may have thought of the clod they divorced. ("Generalizing again," says Marney. "There are women who come from the court with tears streaming down their face, but as many more are radiant and can't wait to get you over to the Cherry Bank for a victory drink. Often, too, there's genuine hate, particularly in the financial settlement, and a woman with hate doesn't cry.")

Myth: Women will generally put up with a bad marriage for the sake of the children. ("It's more often the thinking of the husband," says Marney. "Men will often stay with wives they can't stand because of the possibility of losing day-to-day contact with the children if he moves out. Most husbands have the mistaken idea that the courts will automatically grant the wife custody of the children and it's a common thing for them to stay on rather than risk that.")

Marney dismisses the idea that a woman lawyer, or a man, for that matter, can do much in the way of repairing a shattered partnership.

★ ★ ★

"It's part of our duty, set out in the Divorce Act, to advise on the possibilities of reconciliation and to suggest what marriage counselling or guidance is available," she explains, "but counselling involves counselling both sides and under our adversary system you can't see both. I tell my clients what their situation is, from a legal point of view, and tell them it's up to them to make up their mind. Its a matter of discretion. If a woman comes in black and blue with bruises or has been separated for 15 years there's not much point in suggesting a marriage counsellor. On the other hand, I can sense if a man or woman has made a final decision. Very often I say to myself, 'That one isn't going to break up, at least not yet'."

Like most liberal-minded lawyers Marne was for the easing of Canada's divorce laws that came into effect better than two years ago. Until then the only legal grounds (except for the rarely-encountered sodomy and bestiality sections) were that the innocent party sued the adulterous party. Now, of course, a three-year separation, as well as other evidence of matrimonial offences or marriage break-up, are sufficient.

"More divorces? Yes, though not as many as you might expect. But that," says Marney, blue eyes flashing, "is not the important question. The question is: are there more marriage breakdowns? This we don't know. We are still coping with the thousands and thousands of people whose marriages were completely ended, but couldn't be legally ended.

"Any lawyer can tell you of cases to show why the laws needed liberalizing. Not long ago I got a divorce for a man of 76 years of age who was separated from his wife in 1920 when she went back to England. He started to live with another woman in 1929, raised her family, by a previous marriage, was a devoted husband and father for 40 years, but, until now, was outside the law. Certainly we need an even more liberal approach. It should be enough if the parties are separated for one year, rather then three. What chance is there for reconciliation after a year? But at least we've come this far."

Swartz Bay Delays Now Common

Lines of traffic winding back from the terminal at Swartz Bay to Wain Road on the Pat Bay Highway is becoming a common sight these days as motorists wait—some as long as five hours—to board B.C. ferries.

With travel up and the "stretch" ferry Queen of Victoria out of commission since her Active Pass collision, travellers are resigned to long unscheduled sight-seeing stops at terminal approaches.

B.C. Ferries traffic manager Bob Innes said delays are "certainly a problem" since the Queen of Victoria was damaged.

She carried 192 cars while her replacement, the Queen of Sidney, carries 110 cars, or a loss of 82 cars per sailing.

He said the Queen of Victoria is expected back in service Sept. 4 after repairs in Vancouver.

Bridge Snarls To Ease Soon

By PETER McNELLY

Rush hour traffic jams near Johnson Street Bridge should be eliminated within a year,

The City of Victoria plans to re-structure the present flow of traffic over the bridge as part of the capital budget urban renewal program.

The plan works in three parts. Johnson Street, already slated to be one-way from Douglas to Vancouver, will be converted to a one-way street feeding into the city from the Johnson Street Bridge.

Pandora, also marked out as a one-way artery, will be extended to the bridge across and possibly over Store Street.

Right now, Pandora ends at Store.

Once extended, Pandora will carry one-way traffic toward the bridge from the downtown area.

The third part of the scheme involves the linking together of Wharf and Store Streets. Current plans involve a multi-levelled intersection to prevent the Wharf-Store link from jamming the flow on Pandora and Johnson.

APPROVAL NECESSARY

Council approval is still necessary for the scheme, but approval in principle already exists. The project was included among others in the city planning department's interim report on Inner Harbor renewal which council adopted in November 1969.

The Pandora extension will have to pass through property now owned by the CPR, the site of the E & N terminal on the east side of the bridge.

City officials say they do not expect any difficulty in acquiring the property because the CPR's main railway yards are on the other side of the bridge.

WILL MOVE TERMINAL

And whatever the Canadian Transport Commission decides on the E & N application to stop Dayliner passenger service, the CPR — which owns the E & N — plans to phase out its terminal.

If the Transport Commission rules that the Dayliner must continue, the CPR will move the terminal over to its main railway yard.

If the commission allows the application to discontinue service, the terminal is useless. Either way, the city does not face a difficult land acquisition problem.

Most of the remaining lands on the east side of the bridge are city-owned.

Council will consider details of the scheme and other urban renewal projects for the Inner Harbor once the planning department's final report is completed. This should be before the end of this year.

Funds for the Inner Harbor renewal program can be made available up to $850,000, the amount the city is permitted to borrow under the capital budget package.

Judge's Heart Not So Soft As Ice Cream

By STEVE HUME

It was a hot day and the pint brick of ice cream was already starting to melt.

But Keith Pearson, 19, of 3485 Henderson Road, still had one stop to make at the Oak Bay police station and the ice cream wasn't going to wait.

There was only one thing to do. Eat on the run.

Pearson dug into his pocket for a knife and began using it as a spoon — rather a slick move in the face of a potentially sticky emergency.

★

The last thing he expected on that hot July 11 afternoon was that he would shortly be seized by Oak Bay police and wind up before Judge William Ostler in provincial court today charged with a serious criminal offence.

As Pearson sauntered into the station house eating his ice cream the eagle eyes of the officer on duty identified the utensil as a small switchblade knife — a prohibited weapon under Canadian law.

He told court he didn't know the knife was prohibited.

He said he used it in his work, which required the opening and use of a knife with one hand.

★

"Ignorance of the law," Ostler said, "is no defence."

Pearson shrugged.

"It's either guilty or not guilty. Like I pleaded not guilty, but let's make it fast."

"It seems clear that he did not know it was illegal. Here he was, walking into the jaws of the lion in a careless manner," said the judge.

"There's no suggestion that you're a criminal," he said in fining Pearson $10.

City Uncertain On CPR Leases

City officials said today they are uncertain whether the CPR has received renewal of a foreshore lease on two parcels of Inner Harbor land.

The parcels include property at the foot of Menzies Street and the CPR's new ferry dock at the foot of Oswego.

Following a Thursday meeting of Victoria council, city solicitor T. P. O'Grady has been instructed to ask the federal department of transport:

- Whether the DOT has or has not yet granted renewal of the lease which expired on April 19, 1970.
- Whether the CPR has fulfilled its obligations with the DOT in the way it has sought renewal.

Ald. Peter Pollen charged that the lease had been renewed without consultation with city officials. Pollen's information about the lease came from a carefully-worded letter from the DOT to the city which seemed to imply that the lease had been renewed.

But close reading of the letter, says one city official, makes it impossible to tell whether the lease has been renewed or not.

"Why the mystery?" asked Pollen today. "Is the CPR beyond the control of the federal government? Why does this have to go on behind the scenes in Ottawa?"

City hall sources say that if the CPR has fulfilled certain clauses in its agreement with the DOT, the lease can be renewed without recommendation from the city.

One of these clauses provides that the CPR has to make formal application for renewal in the three months prior to the expiration of the lease.

This would be the three months before April 19. Pollen has said he does not believe the CPR ever made a formal application within the three months prior to the April expiry date.

This issue is important, he says, because it means the DOT will have to listen to the city's views on the CPR lease before granting renewal.

The lands covered by the lease include property at the foot of Menzies Street and the CPR's new ferry docks further down the harbor.

What upsets Pollen is that the CPR has sub-let the space near Menzies to Undersea Gardens.

A new 21-year lease on this land, says Pollen, would mean continuation of "commercial prostitution" of Inner Harbor.

Aldermen Thwart Bid To Save Begbie Street Trees

A last-ditch stand by the Save the Trees Campaign failed at city council Thursday.

Council supported an earlier committee recommendation that work proceed on the four-lane road, with the exception that the boulevard trees on the north side of Begbie between Belmont and Stanley will be saved.

The project, however, will be watch-dogged by a committee after Ald. Clyde Savage said he wants to look over the plans.

"We should be assured just what exactly will happen in the Stadacona Park area," he said.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said the sidewalk by Stadacona Park will be relocated within the park to minimize encroachment by the widened road, which local residents said will be eight feet.

★ ★ ★

Council's agreement with the earlier committee recommendation came without discussion after several residents were allowed earlier to restate opposition to the road project,

Campaign spokesman Richard Morris urged all work be stopped for a full study and that to give cars priority in city planning is shortsighted and puts Victoria on the route to being another New York, Pittsburgh or Los Angeles. He said 1,327 signatures have been obtained in his campaign.

Mrs. L. D. McClintock complained that road plans were billed earlier as simply "major road improvements." Now it was road widening to four lanes "and who's it going to benefit? Not the people in Victoria, but Saanich."

Salmonella Test Covers 959 Samples

A total of 959 samples were examined for traces of the organism that causes salmonella by the laboratory at Royal Jubilee Hospital following the outbreak of the disease in June, said Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's administrator.

Pickles said the laboratory investigates about 250 cultures a month in routine laboratory investigations of enteric infections.

The samples were taken from human feces, swabs of kitchen appliances and food suspected of harboring the bacteria.

The public health staff collected samples from persons who complained of salmonella symptoms after a June 13 banquet at the Empress Hotel from hotel employees who might be possible carriers.

According to Dr. J. L. Whitebread, senior medical officer with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, the source of the outbreak was either a carrier or the food. The turkey served at the meal produced positive swabs for salmonella.

Arthur Mayse . . .

LIKE IT OR NOT, THE top man on British Columbia's totem is Premier William Andrew Cecil Bennett. That fact was made manifest in carved cedarwood at New Hazelton this week, when tribesmen raised a fine pole to mark the opening of 'Ksan Indian Cultural Centre.

That's all very well, and nobody can deny that our provincial government matched the $36,000 raised by the bands dollar for dollar. But I suggest the honor bestowed on totem-topper Bennett might better have gone to Mrs. Polly Sargent.

If it hadn't been for Mrs. Sargent of New Hazelton, the Indian past might never have been reconstructed on a point of land where the Skeena and Kispiox rivers meet.

With Indian help, but otherwise almost single-handed, Polly Sargent stocked and maintained a museum not far from the 38-acre cultural centre tract.

It was from her collection, and with her urging, that the dream of a cultural centre took wing.

Perhaps a trifle of space on the totem should also have been reserved for Victoria's Dr. David B. Turner, former deputy minister of recreation and conservation, who did much to further the dream.

In passing, let me note that Premier Bennett is not the first white man to figure on a totem. On a pole in the Provincial Museum, you will find a sailor in the uniform of a century and more ago.

History doesn't record his name, but he stands depicted in enduring West Coast cedar,

IT REMAINS TO BE learned how much of that hoped-for $10 million Centennial grant from the feds will go to Victoria. However, there's no shortage of notions as to how our share of the loot should be spent.

Some of them make sense, and I hope funds will be available to finance them. Certainly a portion of any grant should go toward resuscitating our badly-mauled and inadequately-housed public library.

While we can get along handsomely without a complex for the arts, especially if that particular plan envisions a new theatre, we could well sink a little something into parks.

For a start, I suggest, restore those diminished Beacon Hill flower beds.

Then, with an entirely new park, make at least partial amends for that shocking great gouge inflicted on Central Park for a status swimming pool.

It should be a good park, with plenty of room for children to play and old people to take their ease.

And, in line with a groundswell of public opinion that has been gathering strength since Victoria writer Gwen Cash set it rolling months ago, let it be called Warren Park.

W. H. (Herb) Warren, recently retired city parks administrator, richly deserves that honor.

As Victoria's chief official green thumb from 1930 until last spring, Herb Warren thought parks, taught parks, and when necessary, defended parks.

May our next one carry his name — no man deserves the tribute half so well.

IT'S BEEN A GREAT SUMmer. It still is. But the signs are out that it won't be with us all that much longer.

The fall fashions don't signify. They go on display while autumn is still distant.

But when kids begin to ask, "What is there to do?", and when the school supplies appear like magic in the stores, the end is well in sight.

Which reminds me that we have a vine-ripened Saltpring Sunrise tomato ready for plucking. It's the first of the season, though by no means the last, and I can taste it already!

Car Demolished in Crash

A man escaped with only minor injuries this morning from an accident that demolished his car.

Donald Kilshaw, of 3927 Peters, had a close call at 2:30 a.m. when his late model car went out of control, failing to negotiate a curve at Four Mile Hill in View Royal, Colwood RCMP said.

Kilshaw's car slammed into a power pole and was a write-off.

Proper Storage an Important Part of Making the Most of Meat

Meat properly stored, will retain its quality in appearance and taste up to the time you want to use it.

The following is a general guide to refrigeration and freezing for most kinds of raw meat, cooked meat, casseroles and poultry.

Also included are two charts which list recommended maximum times for storage. We suggest clipping them and adding them to your recipe file for quick reference.

REFRIGERATION

All fresh, cured and cooked meats should be kept in the refrigerator (36 deg. F. to 40 deg. F.) and used as soon as possible.

Before storing fresh meat, remove paper or transparent wrappings and wrap loosely in waxed paper. The loose wrap permits cold air to circulate around the meat and to lightly dry the surfaces.

Cooked meat should be cooled, then tightly covered to prevent drying out and absorption of odors.

Packaged meats such as ham, bacon, sausage and wieners, are best kept in the package in which they were purchased.

The accompanying recommended refrigerator storage times for meat and poultry are only approximate due to existing variables.

Storage temperature at meat markets, freshness of meat when purchased, care and time between market and "in-home" refrigeration, temperature of home refrigerator and packaging are several factors affecting storage time.

To judge whether meat is spoiled, there is usually a general change in the quality of the meat. This includes loss of freshness and a color change from bright red in the case of beef or pink for pork or veal to a dull grey color. An off-odor will develop and if the meat has been kept in an unopened package, a slippery surface may devlop.

If an off-odor has developed, probably the best rule to apply is, "When in doubt, throw out."

FREEZING

Good quality meat and poultry may be frozen. Remember, freezing holds foods, but cannot improve their character. Prepare carefully under the cleanest possible conditions to avoid contamination. Work quickly and in small lots.

Freeze at or below 0-deg. F. — home freezers, rented freezers, rented freezer lockers and certain separate-door freezers maintain this temperature at all times. Freezer storage sections in many refrigerators may range as high as 20 deg. F. and should only be used for short-term storage.

When preparing meat or poultry for the freezer, choose a moisture proof wrap so that air will be sealed out and moisture locked in.

When air penetrates the package, moisture is drawn from the surface of the meat and the condition known as freezer burn develops. This freezer burn is the drying out of the surface tissues, giving the meat a white appearance. It is not harmful, but does make the dehydrated area tough and tasteless when cooked.

There are several good freezer wraps on the market —i.e. locker paper, moisture vapour-proof cellophane, laminated papers, plastic films and aluminum foil.

Roasts should be packaged individually.

Steaks, chops and patties will separate more easily if folded freezer wrapping or waxed paper is placed between the pices.

Vacuum packaged products may be frozen in their original wrapper.

As with refrigerator storage times, freezer times will also vary due to the condition of the meat when frozen, wrapping material and method, rate of freezing and freezer storage temperature.

It is important to mark on each package the kind of meat, name of cut and date and to keep a record of the meat frozen so that no meat will be kept longer than the recommended strorage time.

In general, most meat and poultry may be frozen. However thickened gravies, sauces and some combination foods such as spaghetti are apt to break down in consistency when frozen. Stuffed poultry should not be frozen at home.

Thawing may take place in the refrigerator, at room temperature or during cooking. It is best to thaw meat and poultry in the wrapping to prevent evaporation of juices. Thawing times will vary due to differences in shape and size of cut. As a general rule, allow approximately 1-2 hours per pound at room temperature and 5-6 hours per pound in the refrigerator.

It is generally recommended that meat which is completely thawed should not be refrozen. Thawing, then refreezing, adversely affects the flavor, texture, appearance and in some cases the food value of a frozen food.

The changes, caused by the growth of bacteria during thawing will be more pronounced in foods that have not been handled under the best possible conditions.

However, if ice crystals are still present within the cut, it can be refrozen. Also, any frozen food that is cooked can be refrozen.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Therapist Suspect

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The advice you give, "seek professional help," is good, except for one hitch. One should check on any prospective therapist first.

I went to a kook whose office walls are festooned with degrees but he must have left his ethics behind in grade school. Three years and thousands of dollars later, I wound up with a divorce. The grounds? Adultery. The man? My therapist. (And I'm not even good looking.)

Therapy often causes women patients to "fall in love" with their doctors, but the competent (and ethical) psychiatrist knows how to handle this situation.

A little investigating later turned up the facts that my doctor was known for tomcatting around. He is still sitting around "helping" people, raking it in and no doubt putting out.

Me? I have a ruined marriage, two fatherless children and no money. Please print this. It might save some unsuspecting woman from my fate.—Bitter.

DEAR BITTER: Most therapists wouldn't touch a patient with a 10-foot pole. You just happened to get the local Lochinvar. However, you are in a better position than I am to "save some unsuspecting woman from the same fate." Report your doctor to the county medical society. He desperately needs therapy himself, and shouldn't be permitted to practice.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for nine years. We have four daughters, seven, five, four and two. We own our own business, own an average home, and drive an average late model car.

My wife is just about the most wonderful woman in the world. She's a great cook, an excellent housekeeper and a fine mother. She loves to work in the yard, seldom raises her voice or loses her temper and we get along beautifully.

Our children are exceptionally well-behaved and we have wonderful friends. My wife loves my folks, and I love hers.

My problem, Dear Abby, is that I am about to go completely out of my mind trying to figure out how a bum like me ever got into such a wonderful situation. Should I accept the fact that I am the luckiest guy in the world, or should I just keep trying to figure this thing out?—Dave In Eugene, Oregon.

DEAR DAVE: Accept it. And also knock on wood and bite your tongue.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were eager to entertain at home after our marriage last year. We have invited friends for cocktails, brunch, foreign meals, buffet dinners and after-theatre suppers. We were pleased with the high number of acceptances, and our guests always seemed to have a good time. As newlyweds we live in a small apartment in new high-rise building in the "city." But in spite of the limited area of entertaining, we have opened our doors to about 150 guests — some of them four or five times.

However, sadly, we must admit, only three couples have reciprocated thus far. The rest are still repeating meaningless phrases, like "drop in sometime," or, "we must get together soon."

Of course we don't intend to "drop in." We are dropping off — their names from our list of future guests. Isn't that the only answer?—Disappointed.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Yes, I think your "eagerness' to get into the social swim, you may have "gone off the deep end." To invite the same people four and five times without a reciprocal invitation from them appears to me as "social climbing." Stick with those who have returned your invitations. If you have only three couples who appreciate your company and hospitality, you're doing well.

DEAR ABBY: What is all this commotion about fat women? My wife is 30 pounds heavier than she was when we were married, but for crying out loud, she is also 30 years older. She is stylish and immaculate and she always has sense enough to wear the propr foundation garments.

She doesn't look as heavy as she is because she is never bouncing, sagging or bursting at the seams. Just because a woman is "fat" doesn't mean she has to be sloppy.—Papa Loves Mamma.

what next?

The free choice of length — the placement of the hemline is unimportant. A variety of lengths have been in fashion for two years. Above is the micro skirt with a skinny ribbed knit.

Uplifting News For Bra Burners

By GINNY GALT

I dreamed I was walking down Douglas Street without my maidenform bra, or any bra for that matter.

An impossible dream?

Well, maybe a year go, but not anymore.

All over North America, women are shedding their bras in the interest of liberation or just plain comfort. They did it New York, Montreal, Vancouver, so why not in staid old Victoria?

A broad survey of Victoria women was taken Wednesday to determine why they had or hadn't taken the plunge, so to speak.

Most of the daring ones were young, slim and attractive. Very confident types.

"I wouldn't have gone without my bra last summer, there would have been too much hassle. But this summer, what the hell? Lots of people are doing it and it's comfortable," said one 15-year old girl in Centennial Square wearing a tye-dyed tee-shirt, belled jeans and bare feet.

"Sure I get some hassle this year too. Fat middle-aged ladies arch their eyebrows at me. One walked up to me last week and called me a little slut. But I don't really worry too much about what other people think," she added.

"Oh mercy, what next!" sputtered one indignant senior citizen, also in Centennial Square, as two young things sporting the unfettered look bounced by.

'Sort of Saggy'

Another 15-year-old girl didn't like the idea of going braless.

"On some people it just looks awful. You know, sort of saggy," she said.

A saleswoman in the lingerie section of a department store said she doesn't think bra sales have gone down this summer.

"But people are buying different styles, softer and lighter than the old ones," she said pointing out rows of rack uplift styles that give support while giving the braless look at the same time.

She said other popular items this summer are the step-in bras and body stockings, "especially for the new soft, clingy sweater styles."

An 80-year old grandmother admitted to not wearing a bra.

"They bother me, so I just wear a slip. But I don't think anyone notices, except once when I was in a store trying on a new suit," said the granny, who was also first in her set to abandon her panty girdle for panty hose.

It seems the saleslady barged into the change room and gave the granny quite a lecture about how shocking it was that a woman her age would go around without a bra.

"The suit doesn't hang on you properly. Honestly, you're supposed to be up here, not way down there," the saleswoman scolded, but it didn't phaze the grandmother. She's just more careful when she goes into stores now.

In New York and some of the other larger cities, some girls are turning up at work in the new look, but most of Victoria's women seem conventional in that respect.

"There's a time and a place for everything. I occasionally doff my bra, but only when I'm at home or where it won't offend anyone. It does upset some people, you know" said a girl working at a drug-store counter.

Free to Move

One interesting observation was that none of the young mothers pushing baby buggies or strollers were wearing the new look, but almost all the mothers carrying their babies papoose-style on their backs were.

"It gives me so much more freedom of movement," said one mother as she reacsed around to give her papoose cookie.

Two athletic-looking girls in tee-shirts on ten-speed bikes said they enjoyed the freedom of movment too.

"We haven't had any comments, just a lot of whistles,' one grinned.

A young blonde woman said if you didn't wear a bra you were inviting trouble.

"I wear one just so I won't be bothered by creeps. I'm bothered enough as it is without adding that to my problems," she complained as a car-load of creeps cruised noisily past honking and shouting for her to go for a ride with them.

"I wouldn't mind liberating myself, moaned a 16-year-old, "But my mother would have a fit."

Britons Question Strange Development

LONDON (UPI) — "By what curious piece of hair-splitting," the Consumer Council asked today, does a bustline become a bust?

Pondering the answer was Lord Drumalbyn, whose baronial crest carries the motto "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills" and who is chairman of the Advertising Standards Association.

The controversy broke out when Drumalbyn's Association, in a revised code of practice, banned ads for "bust developers" but approved promotion for "developers of bustlines."

The Consumer Council, in its magazine focus, asked how the association "arrived at this curious piece of hair-splitting" in differentiating between bustlines and ubsts.

Focus said it printed results of a major investigation into bust developers of all types in December, 1967.

"The conclusions we arrived at, supported by the opinio n of leading emdilac opinion of leading medical authorities,' were that the results claimed by the manufacturers ... could be achieved by the use of a tenpenny rubber ball," Focus said.

Furthermore, the council said, it was unlikely busts would remain developed once the exercise or treatment ceased.

"I could not see then, nor can I see now, the difference between enlarging the bustline as distinct from the bust," the editor of Focus, Eric Grimshaw, said.

Bonds and Stocks Will Often Drop But Diamonds Stay Steady as Rocks

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you have anything left after the stock market slump, Mike Gingold knows where to put it. In diamonds.

Diamonds, as they say, are a girl's best friend. Also a man's.

"Most of us make two major investments in our lives," said Gingold. "One is a house. No, the other is not a car. A car depreciates rapidly. The other is in precious stones."

"Diamonds," continued businessman Gingold, "have gone up in this sagging economy. But look at what's happened to stocks. If I were advising an investor on his portfolio, in addition to savings I'd always include precious stones."

To illustrate how precious jewelry stone costs have risen, Gingold said just take, for instance, a fine one carat diamond. Seven or eight years ago, it could have been bought for $600 to $1,000, depending on color and cut. Today, the same diamond would go for $900 to $1,500.

Some of the rise comes from increased cost of mining, cutting and marketing. But a lot is simply because there just never are enough fine diamonds to meet the demand. Even so, through the centuries, he said, the market has remained fairly stable, not bouncing up and down like a stock market.

Gingold, a personable man with two grown sons and one teen-ager, is idoltate consultant, who also has worked all facets of the jewelry business from designing to buying to selling. He now is president of Nationwide Marketing Associates, Inc., (NMA) a new organization to serve jewelers.

The association's program, in Esseo enroll some 4,000 qualified retail jewelers, to help each with buying (the smaller businessman cannot always make all the big exhibits of gems), help with his local advertising, and to help him broaden his knowledge with seminars.

"In other words," said Gingold in an interview, "to make the little guy stand at tall as the others. Standing tall will come from a "mark of authenticity," sort of a seal of approval, that'll guarantee to the customer that a diamond will be worth just as much in Austin, Tex., as in Seattle, Wash., or Hackensack, N.J., from an NMA member.

As part of the program, NMA will participate in the Pacific Jewelry Show Aug. 16-18 in Los Angeles and the other big national one in Dallas, Sept. 6-8.

Gingold looks at a diamond on the hand, in the vault or around Liz Taylor's neck as pure, unadulterated money. He says through the centuries it has been so, that precious gems are truly international exchange.

"I have seen people leave a country with literally nothing but the clothes on their back," he said. "But they'll manage to take their gems.

"The public has always bought jewelry. When times are bad, it just might be cheaper."

I asked him how to go about that investment in precious gems. "First, you go to a reputable jeweler, to start. Then, if you're loaded with money, go ahead and splurge on a fancy setting and all that.

"But if you're really a sharp investor, get the value in the stone and forget the surroundings, whether it be diamond, ruby or emerald. Pay for the gem, not the gee-whiz."

HIGH CHAPARRAL, 8 p.m., Channel 5. (Time is approximate because show follows a pro football pre-season game between Kansas City Chiefs and Baltimore Colts beginning at 5:30 p.m.

COMEDY TONIGHT, 8 p.m., Channel 12. Jack E. Leonard, Brook Benton, Boni Enten, Peter Boyle and others join host Robert Klein for 60 minutes of fun and frolic.

NET PLAYHOUSE, 8:30 p.m., Channel 9. Unman, Wittering and Zigo (repeat). Tune in for an offbeat and macabre drama which remains fascinating almost to the end. The late British playwright Giles Cooper has fashioned a modern horror story set in a British private school for boys. A group of sadistic students boast to their new, young and ambitious school-master that they murdered their previous master when he tried to discipline them. Unable to come up with any concrete evidence of the crime and lacking the co-operation of the headmaster, the green schoolmaster, well played by Peter Blythe, goes along with the students' outrageous demands, biding time until he can weed out the leader among them. The ending is a bit contrived, but the cold dramatic scenes between the master and his evil pupils are worth watching.

DES O'CONNOR, 9 p.m., Channel 6. Jimmie Rodgers, Connie Stevens and English comedian Jimmy Edwards are Des' guests in London, England.

GOLF HIGHLIGHTS, 10:30 p.m., Channel 4. First two rounds of the PGA Championship are highlighted in this special from Tulsa, Okla.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

6:00: Channel 13: Sins of Rome — the Story of Spartacus (1954 Italian Adventure), Ludmilla Tcherina, Massimo Girotti. Rebel slave incites the Roman gladiators into revolt against the Romans.

8:00: Channel 8: Our Man Flint (1966 Adventure), James Coburn, Lee J. Cobb. Tongue-in-cheek spoof of James Bond films.

9:00: Channel 5: Count Three and Pray (1955 Drama), Van Heflin, Joanne Woodward, Phil Carey. Good western about a Civil War veteran and his influence on a small town.

9:00: Channels 7 and 12: Nine Hours to Rama (1963 Drama), Horst Buchholz. Young newspaper editor joins a reactionary organization opposed to the teachings of Mahatma Gandhi.

11:00: Channel 11: The Breaking Point (1950 Drama), John Garfield, Patricia Neal. Captain of a charter fishing boat becomes involved in a smuggling operation.

11:30: Channel 12: Please Don't Eat the Daisies (1960 Comedy), Doris Day, David Niven. A movie critic and his family move from a Manhattan apartment to the suburbs.

11:40: Channel 2: Some Like It Hot (1959 Comedy), Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis. Unemployed witnesses to a slaying disguise themselves and join an all-girl band — good comedy.

11:40: Channel 6: Our Man Flint (see above).

11:40: Channel 8: Planet of Blood (1966 Science Fiction), John Saxon, Basil Rathbone. Space ship is sent to Mars to investigate a mysterious missile.

12:00: Channel 7: The Man Who Cried Wolf (1937 Melodrama), Lewis Stone, Barbara Read. A ham actor thinks up an involved revenge plot which backfires.

12:00: Channel 13: The Beginning of the End (1947 Drama), Brian Donlevy, Robert Walker, Tom Drake. The story of the first A-bomb.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Many mothers have a lot of trouble with children especially when they go into tantrums of temper, hold their breaths and perhaps turn blue. These spells generally appear during the first few years of life and rarely before six months of age. They usually disappear after four years of age, and they rarey recur after six years. Fortunately, they don't seem to last long enough to injure the brain they are associated often with disturbances of behavior. The trouble tends to run in families.

The outlook for this type of problem is generally good; the associated unconsciousness and convulsions are very short and benign and require no immediate care. Many people are afraid the child may have had something like epilepsy, but the eminent Dr. Samuel Livingston, Johns Hopkins University, who is an expert on epilepsy, says that the parents do not have to fear epilepsy. Dr. Livingston says that the episodes usually last only a minute or so. He tells of having seen 242 patients with this trouble.

Dr. Livingston says that usually the giving of anti-epileptic drugs does not help. Probably, in most families, if the parents did not get into violent conflict with the child, they would not see these distressing episodes. Sometimes the child may use breath-holding as a means of dominating the family. Sometimes the parents make the mistake of getting too anxious and making too great a fuss over the child and his spells, thus enabling him to get away with anything he wants.

People write asking me what causes myositis, or soreness and pain in muscles. In Greek, myo means a muscle, and itis has come to mean inflammation; hence, myositis is an inflammation of muscles.

Often it is very hard to say why musices are inflamed. My impression has been that such inflammation can often be related to an arthritis or inflammation of joints. That does not help much, because we physicians do not know as much about the causes of arthritis as we would like to know. In some cases, we know that germs can grow in muscles and we know that a virus can produce a terrible backache.

Then there are hereditary diseases of muscles that can greatly weaken children; also there is a nonhereditary myasthenia gravis (myo, muscle; A, lack of, sthenos, strength, and gravis, severe). Sometimes people have dermato-myositis (derm meaning skin) with inflamation of the skin and some muscles.

There can be an acute myositis that may have to be treated quickly with cortisone-like drugs and antibiotics. Then there are chronic forms of myositis, and myositis that follows a severe blow due perhaps to an accident. Also there is a type of myosits in which hardening, bone-like changes appear in the muscles.

Some chronic forms of myositis can be treated by a physiotherapist, who will use massage, diathermy, and other physical or electric methods. A good specialist to see might be an expert rheumatologist who treats arthritis.

NEWISH — DISTINCTIVE
You will thrill to the entrance of this lovely home. You enter through double doors to a slate foyer with curved stairway to the upper level. The 15'x22' living room plus a bay window, has w-w carpets, raised hearth fireplace. All drapes remain. The 12'x15' dining room, with w-w has glass doors to covered patio surrounded by private back lawn with more land in natural state. Kitchen is 12'x18' with eating area separate, and has double stainless steel sink with garburetor, ample counters and pass-through cupboards. G.E. automatic dishwasher, G.E. oven and range, with overhead safety controls. Utility room is off kitchen, for washer and dryer, plus a 2-piece service bathroom. The den is very distinctive with wide white oak Captain's Planking and dowels. Dad can even open a wood cupboard and pass the presto logs in for the raised hearth Arizona slate fireplace. The adjacent drive-in garage built into the house is 18'x24' with double doors, leading in from a 21'x24' carport outlined by lovely used brick solid columns. Upstairs are four bedrooms all large (12'x18', 15'x18', 15'x18', 12'x18'). The master has an 8'x10' ensuite bathroom with ceramic shower stall and heat lamp. The walk-in closet has a built-in wall vault. From the master bedroom you step onto a small balcony overlooking oaks, the sea and adjacent islands. All bedrooms have oak except the master with w-w carpets. The huge playroom, above the garage is 21'x24' with knotty cedar walls and is a child's delight and a mother's blessing on rainy days. The grounds are completely sprinklered. The house is so distinctive with white siding and brick. A pleasure to show. Phone for exclusive showing. Wills of Whittomes. (Many other features such as "inter-com" can be pointed out then). Forgot to mention there is a storage basement crawlspace, all cemented.

ACROBATIC THIEVES NABBED BY 'OWL EYE'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The case read like the scenario for an Alfred Hitchcock thriller: police with an electronic eye that peers into the night; a gang of acrobatic jewel thieves with a million-dollar string of successes, and a mad scramble for $240,000 worth of rings tossed out a window.

It began shortly before midnight Wednesday when a burglar alarm brought Sgt. Thomas Connolly of the police department's safe and loft squad and two other officers racing to the Botell Ring Co. on the 18th floor of a 20-storey building in mid-Manhattan.

Atop the building, they searched the darkness with the aid of an "owl eye," an electronic device developed for night fighting in Vietnam. It magnifies available light more than 100 times. They spotted a man hanging by a rope from the second floor window and raced back down the stairs.

Out of the same window, four other men were throwing cases of gold and diamond rings taken from a vault smashed by sledgehammers. One of the cases burst, spewing rings all over a courtyard.

Sidney Heller, president of Botell, said more than 2,000 rings worth $24,000 were recovered, some of them by police who spent more than an hour searching for them on their hands and knees in the courtyard.

Police arrested Raymond Smith, 36, of New York as he dangled from a rope over the courtyard. The others escaped.

FREE TRAVEL IRKS ELDERLY

COVENTRY, England (UPI) — The Coventry council has changed its mind about offering free bus travel to elderly pensioners and decided to keep the one penny special fare.

A council spokesman said it had received scores of angry letters from elderly residents insisting on paying their own way. He said a poll of old peoples' clubs confirmed they did not want free travel.

Sea Cadets Complete Tour of Duty

By PAT DUFOUR

A group of 129 teen-agers left CFB Esquimalt today and the service base will never be quite the same.

Neither will the teen-agers.

These are the 129 Royal Canadian Sea Cadets from many parts of Canada who have spent the past six weeks under training, either taking a boatswain's or physical and recreation training course.

Their impact has caused high-ranking officers to phone and ask: "Who are those doubling around the parade ground.

When told they were cadets, there's been raised eyebrows and the admonition "Keep up the good work."

There's been plenty work.

Forty out of 42 days have been spent on duty with the cadets clamoring for more. Weekends were free — excpt for Sunday morning church services. For some of the teen-agers it was the first time they'd been inside a church.

What are their reactions now that the busy training schedule has come to an end?

They'd like to do it all over again.

So would their instructors.

It wasn't always so.

When leading seamen Dave Wesner and Philip Young were assigned to the summer course their reactions were:

"Sea cadets — ugh!"

Now Young enthuses: "Sea cadets — great! I sure hope I can do it again."

He admits to feeling the force of a generation gap — but it's not the standard one that plagues most adults.

"It's their enthusiasm that gets you. They never stop working. It makes you feel every one of your 35 years."

B.C. ROUNDUP

Judge Issues Bench Warrant

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bench warrant was issued in British Columbia Supreme Court today when a man free on $10,000 bail did not appear to face extradition proceedings launched by the state of California.

Lawyer Jack McGivern, acting for U.S. authorities, said a bulletin has been issued for the arrest of Abraham Geha, 30, a hairdresser alleged to have imported more than 30 pounds of hashish into California from Lebanon.

Geha was arrested in California in 1968, then allegedly skipped $30,000 bail. He was arrested in Vancouver last October.

He had been under treatment here for a continuing illness while on bail.

Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm issued the bench warrant Thursday.

Alderman Quits

PEACHLAND (CP) — Alderman G. E. Fletcher said Thursday he quit his position on municipal council Wednesday night because he was subjected to personal abuse by a local resident.

Clerk Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Len Engler, 21, clerk of the City Centre Motel, was charged Thursday with theft of $700 from the motel last week. He told police then that two bandits held him up in the motel office.

One Beach Bad

KELOWNA (CP) — William Parchomcuk, secretary-manager of the Okanagan Basin Water Board, said Thursday only one beach on Lake Okanagan has been closed this year because of water pollution and other beaches are in "good shape."

Reunion Slated

KELOWNA (CP) — More than 40 officers and men who served on the HMCS Monnow during the Second World War will be here this weekend for the first reunion of the ship's company since the war ended.

Bylaw Quashed

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A city bylaw allowing a children's Foundation boarding house in a residential area was quashed in Supreme Court Thursday on grounds that notice of public hearing on the bylaw did not give proper notice of intention as provided under the Municpal Act. The house was to have been used as a halfway house to integrate disturbed children into the community.

You can't send the kid up in a crate like that! But they did. The bush pilots who opened up our north country flew in open cockpits with rain in the face and wind whining in the struts. After a trip like that, they were ready for a brew like Old Style. Today it's still slow-brewed the natural way, for men who appreciate a down-to-earth flavour.

Lady Senators Do the Job Well

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

Back in mid-May, John Mika, now domiciled in Ottawa, got himself an eight-column headline in this newspaper by coming up with what he called "several exotic names among the dozen or so appointments he (Prime Minister Trudeau) is planning for the Senate." Certainly there were surprises in Mika's list, like Davie Fulton, E. C. Manning and Robert Bonner. Then there was Victoria's popular Dick Wilson and also Rod Haig-Brown.

* * *

These are good suggestions. Each man is Senate material, especially now that Paul Martin has revitalized that chamber and it is (as Mika says) "spawning more important discussion in its special committees — on poverty, the Benson White Paper, the news media, government expropriation powers — than even the lower chamber has managed with a larger and young group."

I have no argument with any one of them, or with the fact that the names cross party lines.

Where I do find fault however, is that John didn't acknowledge there are women in Canada who could — and should — be named to the Senate. Nary a one!

Now, as time draws near (according to the experts) for new senators to be named, other columnists have been looking into their crystal balls and coming up with suggestions.

Again, as far as I can see, no one has given the name of a woman. Which irks me to a point where I'm going to present herewith a few I'm certain could take a full share of responsibility in the revitalized senate.

In doing so I intend to take a leaf from John Mika's book and cross party lines.

Away across on the Atlantic coast (in Halifax) there's Allie Ahern, presently citizen court judge for Nova Scotia. She's been prominent in social reforms and in public service there and would be a happy choice as far as Maritimers are concerned.

In Ontario there's Margaret Hyndman, prominent lawyer and Queen's Counsel, who has sparked more legislation affecting women and children, headed more delegations to government and prepared more briefs asking for reforms, than a good many men.

In British Columbia we have five vacancies to fill and a percentage of these should certainly be women. Let me suggest one or two.

* * *

Mrs Frank Mackenzie Ross, first woman chancellor of a Canadian university (UBC). She is clever, was prominent in conservation work during the Second World War and has been active in many phases of public service.

- Former Mayor Beth Wood of New Westminster. A good speaker, keenly interested in public affairs and presently living the rural life on a Salt Spring Island farm.
- Mrs. Lois Haggen, until the last provincial election a member of the opposition in the Legislature. She sparked many discussions on the floor of the House. Living now in Grand Forks.
- Vernon's Hilda Cryderman, a past president of the British Columbia Teacher's Federation and presently a hard working member of the public Service Staff Relations Board in Ottawa.
- Mrs. Tom Norris (the former Joan Appleton), wife of a retired judge and a member of the parole Board of Canada. She is a former social worker and keenly interested in prison reform.
- Last, but not least, our own Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay, who has proved in the years she has been in municipal government, that she does her homework, can co-operate well with those around her and who is keenly interested in urban affairs.

* * *

There are 104 seats in the supper chamber. Of these, only four at the present time are held by females. (Fergusson, Inman, Quart and Kinnear).

Surely then, it is reasonable to suggest that when Prime Minister Trudeau does make a choice, it should include outstanding Canadian women.

Vegetable Workers To Organize

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Cesar Chavez's farm workers union and the Teamsters Union agreed this week to let Chavez's union organize vegetable workers in the Salinas Valley, ending a bitter jurisdictional battle between the two unions.

The agreement, reached through mediation of the Catholic Bishops' Committee on Farm Labor, gives Chavez future jurisdiction over organizing field workers in lettuce and vegetable crops in the valley 135 miles south of San Francisco.

Chavez, who recently climaxed a five-year struggle by signing contracts with virtually all California table grape growers, agreed to stay out of Teamster jurisdictions in canneries, creameries, processing plants, warehouses and trucking.

Chavez told a news conference his United Farm Workers Organizing Committee now will press for negotiations with produce growers.

Chavez claimed support of 90 per cent of the 7,000 workers in the Salinas area. The Teamsters said they had signed 2,000 agricultural workers in their union.

The agreement was with the Western Conference of Teamsters, which operates in 13 western states and in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

HOME GARDEN

Mass of Color to Greet Visitors

By HILDA BRASTALL

The co-operative display of flowers and plants to be seen all day today and Saturday in the Mall of Hillside Shopping Centre is something new for Victoria. We have a number of district garden clubs and these have been invited to participate in a mass display of color which will advertise the activities of the various groups.

Hilda

Advantages of such a display can be widespread. Shoppers and casual visitors to the Mall may never have been aware a garden club existed in their own district.

They may have come all the way from Albert Head and be surprised to discover a very lively Metchosin Garden Club meets not far from where they are struggling to grow their home garden of flowers and vegetables.

Victoria Horticultural Society will be on home ground as one might say, since they hold many events open to the public from February to September. But still there may be newcomers not aware how far reaching are these services.

Other participating clubs include the Esquimalt Garden Club, View Royal Garden Club, Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society, Victoria Gladiolus and Dahlia Society.

Each group is separately identified. During shopping hours you will usually find members in attendance to give information on their club and its activities in which you are invited to participate.

Memberships will be available, and since these are purely nominal, you cannot afford to be without the advantages of a garden club membership.

It may indeed mean all the difference between success and indifferent results from your gardening. Especially could this be so if you are a newcomer to this area.

Jack and I will be at the Hillside Shopping Centre on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. hoping to help you solve some of your more pressing gardening problems. We shall be right in the Mall where the garden clubs have their displays.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

The deal diagrammed today is a classic one. It arose in the Vanderbilt Cup Championships of 1950. What declarer did at trick one determined whether his team, or the opponents' team, would win this event.

Both sides vulnerable South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
7 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

Dummy's ace of diamonds won the opening lead, declarer discarding the jack of spades from his own hand. The ace of clubs was cashed next, after which South entered his own hand via the heart ace. Trumps were then drawn.

As is apparent, West eventually made his jack of hearts, for the setting trick. As is equally evident, had South chosen to discard the four of hearts at trick one (instead of the spade jack), he would have fulfilled his contract.

South's discarding of the spade jack at trick one was a poor play. The correct line of play was not to discard either the spade or the heart. Instead, South should have deferred his decision. This could have been accomplished by playing low on the opening diamond lead, and ruffing the trick!

The ace of spades would have been cashed next, and this would have been followed by the king of spades. With East's queen falling on the latter lead. Declarer's worries would now be over. Dummy would be entered via the trump ace, and on the diamond ace South would discard his losing four of hearts.

A heart would now be led to South's queen, and the adversely held trumps gathered in. The rest of the tricks would belong to South.

But suppose that when South cashed his ace and king of spades at tricks two and three, he did not catch the spade queen? In this case, he would now be committed to discarding the spade jack on dummy's ace of diamonds, which he would do after entering dummy via the trump ace.

He would then return to the South hand and draw trumps. The success of his contract would now depend on the possession of the doubleton J-x of hearts by one of the opponents, or a 3-3 division of the six missing hearts. Played in the recommended manner, South would not have had to stake his existence on the heart suit.

fun with figures

By J.A.H. HUNTER

Sam picked up a gaudy tie. "So the new stock is in," he commented. "Are you keeping a tally as I asked?"

"Sure." Ann handed him a sheet of paper. "You remember there are three qualities at four dollars, three dollars, and sixty cents each. We've sold just a hundred in all."

"That's great." Sam was checking the figures. "It's funny we've taken exactly one hundred bucks on them."

How many had been sold at each price?

'Big Daddy' Trims Excessive Weight

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Jess Unruh says his rage at being caricatured nationally as the waddling "big daddy" boss of the California legislature in 1963 may have saved his life.

That was when he decided to trim down his 290 pounds while serving as the Democratic Speaker of the assembly.

Now levelled off at 190 pounds, the 47-year-old Unruh is leaving the legislature after 16 stormy years. He will try to unseat Republican Ronald Reagan as governor in the Nov. 3 election.

His assembly colleagues paid Unruh a formal farewell Wednesday although his term officiallly runs through the end of the year.

In 1963, Unruh locked recalcitrant Republicans in the assembly chambers for 24 hours because they wouldn't vote the way he wanted them to on a budget bill.

"It might have been a terrible political mistake for me, but it might have saved my life physically," Unruh said.

Unruh added that he was "so furious" at being pictured in political cartoons throughout the country as "big daddy" he went on a diet.

Downey Dethroned

HALIFAX (CP) — Gary Broughton of Brantford, Ont., won the Canadian middleweight boxing championship here Thursday night, dethroning Dave Downey of Halifax with a ninth-round knockout.

The Bloom of Wool Come of Age

PURE
WOOL

Wool comes into its own as the natural expression for styles that take the joy and freedom of the mini and add a new mood of self-possession and restraint. Wool waited for fashion to make the move to maturity, to put an end to crazy, kooky, far-out looks; it waited for lines to reflect the dignity, spirit and optimism of the new youth. And now they're here at Eaton's. Soft, longer length coats that mate beautifully with pants or skimming dresses, or both. Holding their tailored shape to the form of a natural line. When the bloom of wool comes of age, fashion promises great mileage in styles designed to stay.

Left of Centre top and bottom—Coat ensemble. Double-breasted belter coat, A-line skirt, straight leg pant, fringed scarf and tam to match. Black wool twill with white detail stitching. Sizes 7 to 15 collectively. 70.00

Lower Right—Pant suit. Jacket, skirt and pants in red wool twill. Sizes 7 to 15. 60.00

BUT SHALLOW WATER SITE URGED BY COURT

Florida Fails to Halt Nerve Gas Dumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal district judge refused today to forbid the sea-bottom burial of deadly nerve gas off the Florida coast.

But Judge June L. Green coupled her denial of a temporary restraining order with an "urgent request" that the United States defence department designate a different site for the dumping.

She said she had "serious misgivings" about the selected site. Sinking of a ship carrying the gas at a depth of 16,000 feet, she said, posed the danger of a sudden and simultaneous crushing of all of the concrete-encased gas containers.

Judge Green also noted testimony and affidavits submitted to her that this is the first time the U.S. Army had planned to dispose of gas at such a great depth.

She also noted that two years ago the army disposed of gas in 7,000 feet of water off the New Jersey coast and that later checks by navy scientists had revealed no detectable harm to marine life or anything.

The judge's action came on a complaint by the Environmental Defence Fund, a New York-based citizens' group, and joined by Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida.

WEATHER A PROBLEM

The weather, meanwhile, posed a further challenge to the army's plans to dump the 2,675 tons of gas in the Atlantic off Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The weather bureau in Miami reported a dangerous tropical depression with winds of 60 miles an hour approaching the Bahamas and Florida.

Although there were no present forecasts of a possible hurricane in the area, Dr. Robert H. Simpson, head of the National Hurricane Centre in Miami, said it was possible a hurricane "could come with great suddenness."

Lawyers for the fund said they would appeal Judge Green's decision immediately to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

There was no immediate indication, moreover, about the reaction of the defence department and the army to the judge's request that they seek another disposal site "at a reasonable distance" from Sunny Point, N.C., the port of embarkation.

PLANS CONTINUE

At Sunny Point, where the loading of the 418 steel- and concrete-encased nerve gas rockets was proceeding, navy Capt. A. G. Hamilton, commander of the sea phase of the operation, said he was watching the tropical depression carefully and would not move out of port if it became a threat to the burial area.

Hamilton said the tugs would not begin pulling the ship to sea until they had a 96-hour forecast of good weather. He said the operation would remain in port until such a forecast was made.

If the weather is favorable, Hamilton said he hopes to get the operation under way late Saturday. However, the loading of the caskets was running slightly behind schedule and might not be completed until Sunday, he said.

NO DANGER, SAYS U.K.

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain announced today that American plans to dump nerve gas off the Florida coast will cause no appreciable harmful effect aside from localized damage to marine life.

The foreign office released the conclusions of a report of a team of British experts which discussed the dumping problem with U.S. officials

COMMON ENERGY POLICY URGED

MONTREAL — Canada and the United States should form a common policy on continental energy resources, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel told a Montreal news conference here Thursday.

He was commenting on Canadian guidelines for oil development in the north announced in Ottawa Thursday. See story on Page 2.

CANADA POLICY

Gas Imports Face Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene announced today new regulations requiring importers of motor gasoline for use anywhere in Canada to get licences from the national energy board — a step to reinforce the government's national oil policy.

The announcement follows months of controversy over the market effects of cheaper imported oil and gasoline on the Alberta-produced oil refined in Eastern Canada by the major oil companies.

NOW IN EFFECT

Under the new regulations which went into effect Thursday, the national energy board will have to judge whether certain applications to import motor gasoline are consistent with the development of Canada's own oil resources.

On May 7, the national energy board imposed a ban on sales of imported gasoline west of the Ottawa Valley but this ban was ruled unconstitutional by the Exchequer Court earlier this month.

The court decision allowed Cal Oil Inc. of Montreal to import gasoline, apparently from Spain.

Greene today said the objectives of the national oil policy are still valid. The government was trying a new approach.

ALSO VENEZUELA

The board is also trying to stop the flow of Montreal-refined gasoline from Venezuela west of the Ottawa Valley dividing line.

The Exchequer Court decision by Mr. Justice W. R. Jackett, the court's president, did not affect the voluntary arrangement keeping gasoline and other products refined in Montreal from Venezuelan imported crude out of the region west of the Ottawa area.

That agreement was made in 1961 at the time the national oil policy was announced. However, there is some movement of gasoline into Eastern Ontario.

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and other companies have said they are reducing production at Ontario refineries using Alberta crude because of stiffer competition from lower-price and Montreal-refined gasoline.

NDP SEES RESOURCES 'SELL-OUT'

OTTAWA (CP) — T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, accused Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin today of trying to intimidate the national energy board into approving a huge export of natural gas to the United States.

He said at a news conference the federal government is preparing a further sell-out of Canadian energy resources to the U.S.

He said Pepin has stated publicly the energy board ought to approve the export of $3 billion worth of natural gas to the U.S.

Schools Squeeze To Continue

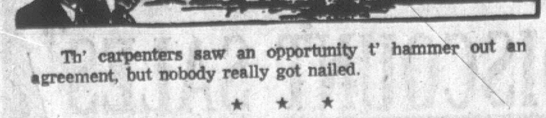
QUESNEL (CP) — Education Minister Donald Brothers said Thursday the provincial government will continue for another year to restrict school construction to essentials.

"Money markets are still as tight as ever, if not tighter," he said. "Interest rates have not come down."

He said he has given this message to school board officials: "We don't want palaces built. We want functional schools — not cheap schools, but effective, efficient, well-built schools."

He also said he is trying to persuade school boards to look at the idea of consolidating school districts to reduce staff.

"We are being overgoverned in B.C. We have too many officials, too many secretary-treasurers, too many superintendents."



Th' carpenters saw an opportunity t' hammer out an agreement, but nobody really got nailed.

IT'S ONLY A PAPER WAR but up until the Manitoba legislature was prorogued Thursday after the longest session in its history, these two combatants, NDP labor minister A. R. ANTI-INFLATIONARY policies by Ottawa are paying off, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Thursday, in hailing the unusually slow rate of increase in the consumer price index. The index rose by one-half of one per cent in July from June. For details see Page 10.

OTTAWA (CP) — The sale of all foods containing cyclamates will be banned by Sept. 1, the health department said today.

Measles Fight Gets $25,000

The Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. announced today it is donating $25,000 to a province-wide attack on German measles.

It's the latest development in a wave of support from a variety of sources which will stretch the provincial government's limited innoculation program.

Foundation secretary Allen Cowen of Vancouver announced the contribution at a press conference in Saanich municipal hall this morning.

He said he hopes the Kinsmen move will spur other foundations to boost the campaign the provincial government has launched on a budget of $88,000.

COUNCILS DONATE

Victoria and Saanich councils have decided to contribute $5,000 each, enough to supply vaccine for the preschoolers in each municipality. Central and North Saanich councils are participating and Esquimalt and Oak Bay councils are expected to consider the subject at their meetings.

The province's campaign will be aimed at elementary school children on a priority basis.

The campaign, and the push for funds, stems from two developments. For the first time there is a vaccine which appears to deliver long-term immunity from German measles or rubella.

And there has been an outbreak of the disease this spring with more anticipated this fall and winter. It is characteristically less prevalent in the summer.

Mid-East Ceasefire Deteriorates As Israeli Jets Pound Jordan

JERUSALEM (CP)—Israeli air force planes struck at Jordanian army positions today, the military command said, in further deterioration of the Middle East ceasefire.

The command said the raid was launched against Jordanian army strongholds which have given assistance to Palestinian guerrillas in attacks against Israeli frontier settlements.

A spokesman had announced earlier that Israeli air force jets crossed the border today and bombed and strafed Arab guerrilla targets inside Jordan for the second straight day.

The Tel Aviv spokesman said those raids were in response to mortar attacks on two Jewish settlements.

The planes all returned safely after hitting objectives adjacent to Israel's Beisan Valley, he said. Beisan Valley settlements of Maoz Haim and Yardena came under mortar fire Thursday night, but no damage was reported.

This was the second Israeli air strike inside Jordan since the Middle East ceasefire went into effect a week ago. The guerrilla organizations have disowned the truce initiated by the United States as a preliminary to peace talks.

ANTI-POLLUTION DRIVE THREATENS US—CFI

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Council of the Forest Industries of British Columbia said Thursday the future of the industry would be threatened by the enforcement of strict anti-pollution measures.

A brief, presented by council president Gordon Draeseke to a public hearing of the pollution control branch, said any control measures adopted by the provincial government must be feasible for the forest industry to implement.

The brief said that standards of pollution control should be set for each individual forest operation instead of for the industry generally.

Pulp Workers Call Walkout

A strike that would close down eight more B.C. pulp mills has been set for midnight Wednesday.

Pat O'Neal, spokesman for the Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, said in Prince George the strike would begin when the term of provincial mediator Gus Leonidas expires.

Involved are 5,700 members of the Brotherhood and more than 1,200 members of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers union.

The men are employed at MacMillan Bloedel plants at Powell River and Port Alberni; Crown Zellerbach mills at Elk Falls and Ocean Falls; Rayonier mills at Port Alice and Port Mellon on Howe Sound; Northwood Pulp in Prince George; and Kamloops Pulp and Paper.

Eight other pulp mills have been shut down since July 24 as a result of a strike by 4,200 members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. The mills are at Crofton, Harmac, Gold River, Woodfibre, Prince George (2), Castlegar and Skookumchuk.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson has reminded construction workers that any walkouts they may have in mind would be illegal.

Crucial Break In Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 9,000-member carpenters union and the Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for 600 British Columbia building contractors, today announced signing of a new two-year contract.

A joint statement by the union and the CLRA said the agreement adopted proposals made two weeks ago by deputy labor minister William Sands, who acted as mediator.

The new contract, running to March 31, 1972, provides an increase of $1.38 an hour in wages and fringe benefits, spread over the two years.

WORK HALTED

The agreement already approved by secret ballot of union members and CLRA member-organizations — is seen as crucial in the B.C. dispute, which saw work almost completely stopped through the province for three months.

The former base rate for carpenters — including fringes —was $5.03 an hour. This increases to $6.41 in the final stage of the two-year agreement.

The carpenters will get an immediate increase of 45 cents, retroactive to June 1. Additional increases during the contract will be 37 cents Oct. 1, 36 cents April 1, 1971, and 20 cents Oct. 1, 1971.

The carpenters union was the largest of 10 locked out by the contractors' association last spring. A total of 25,000 construction workers were locked out or on strike during the three-month stoppage that ended July 27.

INTERVENTION

Work was resumed after the provincial government invoked compulsory arbitration sections of the B.C. Mediation Commission Act.

Most of the unions indicated they would not return, but after personal intervention by Premier Bennett and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, the two sides agreed to go back to work and submit their disputes to mediation by Deputy Labor Minister Sands.

Since then, six unions have voted to reject Sands's proposals for settlement.

Aquacare Signs Pact to Produce Products in Italy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Aquacare International Ltd., a Vancouver-based firm producing equipment to clean and sterilize water using ultra-violet rays and carbon filters, has announced an agreement for manufacture and distribution of its products in Italy.

Company president Gordon W. Robertson said the exclusive licence arrangement, Aquacare's first in Europe, calls for minimum royalties of $1,275,000 over the next 10 years.

He also announced the acquisition of Cerco Chemicals Ltd. of Toronto, which has developed a "plastic chlorine exchange resin" produced in small pellets which permit the control of chlorine levels without valves, meters or other mechanical devices.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Upswing in Industrials

Major North American stock markets ended their decline today with industrials at New York and Toronto marking up gains.

At Toronto the market turned upward in early afternoon trading, cancelling morning losses and interrupting four consecutive losing sessions. Largest gains were in beverage, communication and trust and loan sectors. Industrials finished ahead .26.

Analysts at New York said recent favorable economic news had put investors in more of a buying mood than they had been of late. Industrials posted a 3.94 point gain.

AT TORONTO, in industrials, Falconbridge rose 1 to 135, CPR 1 to 56, Aimco ⅞ to 10½, Dome Pete ⅞ to 53⅞ and Income Disability ½ to 7.

Texas Gulf Sulphur dropped ½ to 13¾, Erie Diversified ⅛ to 5, Simpsons ⅜ to 14, Thomson Newspapers ¼ to 16¼ and Inco ⅛ to 40⅛.

Bethlehem was up ½ to 16¼, Lake Dufault ⅜ to 15⅜, Sherritt ¼ to 19, Madeline 15 cents to $3.80 and Embako ⅛ to 13⅛.

Dennison was down ¾ to 24¼, Placer ⅜ to 32, Granduc 35 cents to $8.05 and Consolidated Marbenor 10 cents to $3.75.

Scurry Rainbow gained ⅝ to 17⅜, Alberta Eastern Gas 20 cents to $5.10, Central-Del Rio 20 cents to $10, Siebens 15 cents to $8.10 and BP Oil and Gas 15 cents to $4.30.

Dynamic lost five cents to $1.50, Permo eight cents to 96 cents and Syracuse seven cents to $2.23.

AT NEW YORK, advancing issues held a moderate lead over decliners. Prices near the close included Xerox up 1⅛ at 67⅛, Boise Cascade, off 2¼ at 40½ and Dart Industries off 1 at 29¼.

AT MONTREAL, prices slipped from morning highs and were mixed in early-afternoon trading on the stock market today. Trading was brisk.

Papers, which had been up nearly two points earlier, slipped fractionally and utilities were ahead nearly one point.

Among declines were Labatt, off 1¼ to 22, Denison ¾ to 24½, Dominion Textile ½ to 11⅛, Simpsons ⅜ to 13⅞, MacMillan-Bloedel ¼ to 23, Royal Bank ¼ to 21⅝ and Alcan Aluminum ⅛ to 20½.

Highlighting advances were Husky Oil, up ⅛ to 9¾, and Abitibi Pulp and Paper, up ⅛ to 7. Husky reported first-half net income of $1.6 million of 14 cents a share against $2.8 million or 26 cents a year earlier.

Abitibi reported first-half net earnings of $3.1 million or 15 cents, down from $6.6 million or 35 cents last year.

Among other advances were CPR, up 2 to 56½, Trans Canada Pipeline 1¾ to 56¾, International Utilities ½ to 25½, Consolidated-Bathurst ⅜ to 10⅛, Distillers-Seagrams ⅜ to 45, Falconbridge Nickel ¼ to 134¼ and IOS Ltd., 30 cents to 1.60.

AT LONDON the stock market moved lower in quiet trading. The continued drift on Wall Street and a warning from engineering employers on cost inflation and the possible effects pushed prices lower.

IOS raillied after Thursday's weakness following attempts by former chairman Cornfeld at a compromise with the new management.

Domw, Gulf, Abitibi, Hollinger, Inco, Noranda, Price Bros., and Algoma were Canadians to ease but losses did not exceed two points. Canadian Pacific was a dull spot 5½ points down at 137¾.

AT VANCOUVER prices were mixed in moderate trading on a volume of 844,438 shares on the stock exchange this morning.

In the industrials, Block Bros. was the most active issue, trading a volume of 28,275 shares up .05 at $3.10. Tokar was up .05 at $2.55 and Pace Industries was unchanged at $1.

Royal Canadian Ventures led trading in the oils down .08 at $1.05 on a turnover of 27,550 shares. United Bata was up .10 at $3.25 and Share Oil traded at .14.

In the mines, Gibraltar was the most active trader with a volume of 67,050 shares down .30 at $4.25. Pyramid was up .04 at .31 and Mariner was up .02 at .37.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade was generally light at the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, with most of the buying activity centred in rapeseed and rye.

Rye posted solid gains, as offers continued to meet good shipper absorption.

The Canadian Wheat Board announced an increase of ½ cent in oats, and ¾ cents in barleys one feed and lower. Malting barleys down to and including 3 C.W. 6-row are down 1½ cents and 3 C.W. 2-row, and one, two and three feed were down two cents.

Lakehead prices for Class Two and IGA wheat were all down ¼ cent.

DIVORCE MYTHS

A Necessary Evil —Separate Ways

By Jack Scott

If somebody at a party, say, were to point out Marney Stevenson and tell you that she'd broken up more homes than any other woman in Victoria you might wonder how a nice girl like that went astray.

Fact is that Marney is a lawyer, perhaps the busiest in Victoria's divorce courts, herself 20 happy years in the matrimonial ring, mother of two and a woman who looks upon her specialty almost as a necessary evil.

Scott

"Often it's the only way out of an impossible situation," she will tell you, "but every divorce can be described as a defeat of human relations. When it's a defended action it can be an emotional, terrible, heart-breaking thing. I always feel that if I go to court on a defended divorce I've in some way failed."

An attractive, vibrant woman with laser-beam blue eyes, Marney left a lawyer's office as secretary in 1948 and emerged from university seven years later to article in Victoria. In the past five years, though she hadn't planned it this way, her professional life has been a steady round of divorces, separations, working out maintenance arrangements, custody of the children and those other messy results of marriage-on-the-rocks.

"A clientele like this comes mainly from word-of-mouth and because so often people with family problems tend to group together," she explains. "The other night, for instance, I went into the Strathcona for a drink after work. There was a table with six women and a man at it. I suddenly realized that I'd been legally involved in the matrimonial affairs of each of them."

There are, it seems, a surprising number of inaccurate generalities and accepted myths about divorce that amuse or irritate every lawyer in the field.

★ ★ ★

Myth: Victoria is a quiet little backwater of older, contented couples who'd rather fight than switch. ("Nonsense," says Marney. "There's no lawyer in Vancouver any busier than I am in Victoria. On a per capita basis the divorce rate here may be higher than anywhere else in Canada. It is certainly not less."

Myth: Nine out of every 10 divorces are granted to women against men. '("Absolutely false," says Marney. "For every three women who are granted a divorce there are two men. You might imagine that my own clients would be mostly women, perhaps thinking that a woman lawyer would be more sympathetic with their problems, but, in fact, for every woman who walks through that door there's a man.")

Myth: The early years of marriage are the dangerous years and economic problems, wrangling over where the money goes, are the hang-ups that most often cause separation. ("There's only one basic cause for divorce: People," says Marney. "In marriage, every year is the dangerous year. Certainly rushing into it without experience may lead to divorce, but just as significant a group are those of 40 and over. Very often they've been so busy and involved in having kids, getting established and working, that when the kids have grown and gone they look at each other, really look at each other, for the first time in 20 years, and find they can't stand each other.

"As for economic problems, sure, they're often a factor, but today there are as many people in the upper-income brackets getting divorces as in the lower-income brackets. No, the cause is people and the kind of society we're living in today.")

Myth: Women invariably weep at the moment of legal parting, whatever they may have thought of the clod they divorced. ("Generalizing again," says Marney. "There are women who come from the court with tears streaming down their face, but as many more are radiant and can't wait to get you over to the Cherry Bank for a victory drink. Often, too, there's genuine hate, particularly in the financial settlement, and a woman with hate doesn't cry.")

Myth: Women will generally put up with a bad marriage for the sake of the children. ("It's more often the thinking of the husband," says Marney. "Men will often stay with wives they can't stand because of the possibility of losing day-to-day contact with the children if he moves out. Most husbands have the mistaken idea that the courts will automatically grant the wife custody of the children and it's a common thing for them to stay on rather than risk that.")

Marney dismisses the idea that a woman lawyer, or a man, for that matter, can do much in the way of repairing a shattered partnership.

★ ★ ★

"It's part of our duty, set out in the Divorce Act, to advise on the possibilities of reconciliation and to suggest what marriage counselling or guidance is available," she explains, "but counselling involves counselling both sides and under our adversary system you can't see both. I tell my clients what their situation is, from a legal point of view, and tell them it's up to them to make up their mind. Its a matter of discretion. If a woman comes in black and blue with bruises or has been separated for 15 years there's not much point in suggesting a marriage counsellor. On the other hand, I can sense if a man or woman has made a final decision. Very often I say to myself, 'That one isn't going to break up, at least not yet'."

Like most liberal-minded lawyers Marne was for the easing of Canada's divorce laws that came into effect better than two years ago. Until then the only legal grounds (except for the rarely-encountered sodomy and bestiality sections) were that the innocent party sued the adulterous party. Now, of course, a three-year separation, as well as other evidence of matrimonial offences or marriage break-up, are sufficient.

"More divorces? Yes, though not as many as you might expect. But that," says Marney, blue eyes flashing, "is not the important question. The question is: are there more marriage breakdowns? This we don't know. We are still coping with the thousands and thousands of people whose marriages were completely ended, but couldn't be legally ended.

"Any lawyer can tell you of cases to show why the laws needed liberalizing. Not long ago I got a divorce for a man of 76 years of age who was separated from his wife in 1920 when she went back to England. He started to live with another woman in 1929, raised her family, by a previous marriage, was a devoted husband and father for 40 years, but, until now, was outside the law. Certainly we need an even more liberal approach. It should be enough if the parties are separated for one year, rather then three. What chance is there for reconciliation after a year? But at least we've come this far."

Swartz Bay Delays Now Common

Lines of traffic winding back from the terminal at Swartz Bay to Wain Road on the Pat Bay Highway is becoming a common sight these days as motorists wait—some as long as five hours—to board B.C. ferries.

With travel up and the "stretch" ferry Queen of Victoria out of commission since her Active Pass collision, travellers are resigned to long unscheduled sightseeing stops at terminal approaches.

B.C. Ferries traffic manager Bob Innes said delays are "certainly a problem" since the Queen of Victoria was damaged.

She carried 192 cars while her replacement, the Queen of Sidney, carries 110 cars, or a loss of 82 cars per sailing.

He said the Queen of Victoria is expected back in service Sept. 4 after repairs in Vancouver.

Bridge Snarls To Ease Soon

By PETER McNELLY

Rush hour traffic jams near Johnson Street Bridge should be eliminated within a year.

The City of Victoria plans to re-structure the present flow of traffic over the bridge as part of the capital budget urban renewal program.

The plan works in three parts. Johnson Street, already slated to be one-way from Douglas to Vancouver, will be converted to a one-way street feeding into the city from the Johnson Street Bridge.

Pandora, also marked out as a one-way artery, will be extended to the bridge across and possibly over Store Street.

Right now, Pandora ends at Store.

Once extended, Pandora will carry one-way traffic toward the bridge from the downtown area.

The third part of the scheme involves the linking together of Wharf and Store Streets. Current plans involve a multi-levelled intersection to prevent the Wharf-Store link from jamming the flow on Pandora and Johnson.

APPROVAL NECESSARY

Council approval is still necessary for the scheme, but approval in principle already exists. The project was included among others in the city planning department's interim report on Inner Harbor renewal which council adopted in November 1969.

The Pandora extension will have to pass through property now owned by the CPR, the site of the E & N terminal on the east side of the bridge.

City officials say they do not expect any difficulty in acquiring the property because the CPR's main railway yards are on the other side of the bridge.

WILL MOVE TERMINAL

And whatever the Canadian Transport Commission decides on the E & N application to stop Dayliner passenger service, the CPR — which owns the E & N — plans to phase out its terminal.

If the Transport Commission rules that the Dayliner must continue, the CPR will move the terminal over to its main railway yard.

If the commission allows the application to discontinue service, the terminal is useless. Either way, the city does not face a difficult land acquisition problem.

Most of the remaining lands on the east side of the bridge are city-owned.

Council will consider details of the scheme and other urban renewal projects for the Inner Harbor once the planning department's final report is completed. This should be before the end of this year.

Funds for the Inner Harbor renewal program can be made available up to $850,000, the amount the city is permitted to borrow under the capital budget package.

Salmonella Test Covers 959 Samples

A total of 959 samples were examined for traces of the organism that causes salmonella by the laboratory at Royal Jubilee Hospital following the outbreak of the disease in June, said Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's administrator.

Pickles said the laboratory investigates about 250 cultures a month in routine laboratory investigations of enteric infections.

The samples were taken from human feces, swabs of kitchen appliances and food suspected of harboring the bacteria.

The public health staff collected samples from persons who complained of salmonella symptoms after a June 13 banquet at the Empress Hotel from hotel employees who might be possible carriers.

According to Dr. J. L. Whitebread, senior medical officer with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, the source of the outbreak was either a carrier or the food. The turkey served at the meal produced positive swabs for salmonella.

Judge's Heart Not So Soft As Ice Cream

By STEVE HUME

It was a hot day and the pint brick of ice cream was already starting to melt.

But Keith Pearson, 19, of 3485 Henderson Road, still had one stop to make at the Oak Bay police station and the ice cream wasn't going to wait.

There was only one thing to do. Eat on the run.

Pearson dug into his pocket for a knife and began using it as a spoon — rather a slick move in the face of a potentially sticky emergency.

★

The last thing he expected on that hot July 11 afternoon was that he would shortly be seized by Oak Bay police and wind up before Judge William Ostler in provincial court today charged with a serious criminal offence.

As Pearson sauntered into the station house eating his ice cream the eagle eyes of the officer on duty identified the utensil as a small switch-blade knife — a prohibited weapon under Canadian law.

He told court he didn't know the knife was prohibited.

He said he used it in his work, which required the opening and use of a knife with one hand.

★

"Ignorance of the law," Ostler said, "is no defence."

Pearson shrugged.

"It's either guilty or not guilty. Like I pleaded not guilty, but let's make it fast."

"It seems clear that he did not know it was illegal. Here he was, walking into the jaws of the lion in a careless manner," said the judge.

"There's no suggestion that you're a criminal," he said in fining Pearson $10.

City Uncertain On CPR Leases

City officials said today they are uncertain whether the CPR has received renewal of a foreshore lease on two parcels of Inner Harbor land.

The parcels include property at the foot of Menzies Street and the CPR's new ferry dock at the foot of Oswego.

Following a Thursday meeting of Victoria council, city solicitor T. P. O'Grady has been instructed to ask the federal department of transport:

- Whether the DOT has or has not yet granted renewal of the lease which expired on April 19, 1970.
- Whether the CPR has fulfilled its obligations with the DOT in the way it has sought renewal.

Ald. Peter Pollen charged that the lease had been renewed without consultation with city officials. Pollen's information about the lease came from a carefully-worded letter from the DOT to the city which seemed to imply that the lease had been renewed.

But close reading of the letter, says one city official, makes it impossible to tell whether the lease has been renewed or not.

"Why the mystery?" asked Pollen today. "Is the CPR beyond the control of the federal government? Why does this have to go on behind the scenes in Ottawa?"

City hall sources say that if the CPR has fulfilled certain clauses in its agreement with the DOT, the lease can be renewed without recommendation from the city.

One of these clauses provides that the CPR has to make formal application for renewal in the three months prior to the expiration of the lease.

This would be the three months before April 19. Pollen has said he does not believe the CPR ever made a formal application within the three months prior to the April expiry date.

This issue is important, he says, because it means the DOT will have to listen to the city's views on the CPR lease before granting renewal.

The lands covered by the lease include property at the foot of Menzies Street and the CPR's new ferry docks further down the harbor.

What upsets Pollen is that the CPR has sub-let the space near Menzies to Undersea Gardens.

A new 21-year lease on this land, says Pollen, would mean continuation of "commercial prostitution" of Inner Harbor.

Aldermen Thwart Bid To Save Begbie Street Trees

A last-ditch stand by the Save the Trees Campaign failed at city council Thursday.

Council supported an earlier committee recommendation that work proceed on the four-lane road, with the exception that the boulevard trees on the north side of Begbie between Belmont and Stanley will be saved.

The project, however, will be watch-dogged by a committee after Ald. Clyde Savage said he wants to look over the plans.

"We should be assured just what exactly will happen in the Stadacona Park area," he said.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said the sidewalk by Stadacona Park will be relocated within the park to minimize encroachment by the widened road, which local residents said will be eight feet.

★ ★ ★

Council's agreement with the earlier committee recommendation came without discussion after several residents were allowed earlier to restate opposition to the road project.

Campaign spokesman Richard Morris urged all work be stopped for a full study and that to give cars priority in city planning is shortsighted and puts Victoria on the route to being another New York, Pittsburgh or Los Angeles. He said 1,327 signatures have been obtained in his campaign.

Mrs. L. D. McClintock complained that road plans were billed earlier as simply "major road improvements." Now it was road widening to four lanes "and who's it going to benefit? Not the people in Victoria, but Saanich."

Arthur Mayse . . .

LIKE IT OR NOT, THE top man on British Columbia's totem is Premier William Andrew Cecil Bennett. That fact was made manifest in carved cedarwood at New Hazelton this week, when tribesmen raised a fine pole to mark the opening of 'Ksan Indian Cultural Centre.

That's all very well, and nobody can deny that our provincial government matched the $36,000 raised by the bands dollar for dollar. But I suggest the honor bestowed on totem-topper Bennett might better have gone to Mrs. Polly Sargent.

If it hadn't been for Mrs. Sargent of New Hazelton, the Indian past might never have been reconstructed on a point of land where the Skeena and Kispiox rivers meet.

With Indian help, but otherwise almost single-handed, Polly Sargent stocked and maintained a museum not far from the 38-acre cultural centre tract.

It was from her collection, and with her urging, that the dream of a cultural centre took wing.

Perhaps a trifle of space on the totem should also have been reserved for Victoria's Dr. David B. Turner, former deputy minister of recreation and conservation, who did much to further the dream.

In passing, let me note that Premier Bennett is not the first white man to figure on a totem. On a pole in the Provincial Museum, you will find a sailor in the uniform of a century and more ago.

History doesn't record his name, but he stands depicted in enduring West Coast cedar.

IT REMAINS TO BE learned how much of that hoped-for $10 million Centennial grant from the feds will go to Victoria. However, there's no shortage of notions as to how our share of the loot should be spent.

Some of them make sense, and I hope funds will be available to finance them. Certainly a portion of any grant should go toward resuscitating our badly-mauled and inadequately-housed public library.

While we can get along handsomely without a complex for the arts, especially if that particular plan envisions a new theatre, we could well sink a little something into parks.

For a start, I suggest, restore those diminished Beacon Hill flower beds.

Then, with an entirely new park, make at least partial amends for that shocking great gouge inflicted on Central Park for a status swimming pool.

It should be a good park, with plenty of room for children to play and old people to take their ease.

And, in line with a groundswell of public opinion that has been gathering strength since Victoria writer Gwen Cash set it rolling months ago, let it be called Warren Park.

W. H. (Herb) Warren, recently retired city parks administrator, richly deserves that honor.

As Victoria's chief official green thumb from 1930 until last spring, Herb Warren thought parks, taught parks, and when necessary, defended parks.

May our next one carry his name — no man deserves the tribute half so well.

IT'S BEEN A GREAT SUMmer. It still is. But the signs are out that it won't be with us all that much longer.

The fall fashions don't signify. They go on display while autumn is still distant.

But when kids begin to ask, "What is there to do?", and when the school supplies appear like magic in the stores, the end is well in sight.

Which reminds me that we have a vine-ripened Saltpring Sunrise tomato ready for plucking. It's the first of the season, though by no means the last, and I can taste it already!

Car Demolished in Crash

A man escaped with only minor injuries this morning from an accident that demolished his car.

Donald Kilshaw, of 3927 Peters, had a close call at 2:30 a.m. when his late model car went out of control, failing to negotiate a curve at Four Mile Hill in View Royal, Colwood RCMP said.

Kilshaw's car slammed into a power pole and was a write-off.

Proper Storage an Important Part of Making the Most of Meat

Meat properly stored, will retain its quality in appearance and taste up to the time you want to use it.

The following is a general guide to refrigeration and freezing for most kinds of raw meat, cooked meat, casseroles and poultry.

Also included are two charts which list recommended maximum times for storage. We suggest clipping them and adding them to your recipe file for quick reference.

REFRIGERATION

All fresh, cured and cooked meats should be kept in the refrigerator (36 deg. F. to 40 deg. F.) and used as soon as possible.

Before storing fresh meat, remove paper or transparent wrappings and wrap loosely in waxed paper. The loose wrap permits cold air to circulate around the meat and to lightly dry the surfaces.

Cooked meat should be cooled, then tightly covered to prevent drying out and absórption of odors.

Packaged meats such as ham, bacon, sausage and wieners, are best kept in the package in which they were purchased.

Refrigerator Storage Time Chart
(Refrigerator Temperature 36 deg. F. - 40 deg. F.)

Meat (loosely wrapped)	Recommended Maximum Storage Time in Days
Roasts	3—4
Steaks and Chops	2—3
Ground Meat	1—2
Liver, Heart, Kidney, etc.	1
Cured and Smoked Meats	6—7
Sausages	1—2
Wieners	2—3
Cooked Meats	3—4
Leftover Casseroles and Stews	2—3
Poultry	2—3

The accompanying recommended refrigerator storage times for meat and poultry are only approximate due to existing variables.

Storage temperature at meat markets, freshness of meat when purchased, care and time between market and "in-home" refrigeration, temperature of home refrigerator and packaging are several factors affecting storage time.

To judge whether meat is spoiled, there is usually a general change in the quality of the meat. This includes loss of freshness and a color change from bright red in the case of beef or pink for pork or veal to a dull grey color. An off-odor will develop and if the meat has been kept in an unopened package, a slippery surface may devlop.

If an off-odor has developed, probably the best rule to apply is, "When in doubt, throw out."

FREEZING

Good quality meat and poultry may be frozen. Remember, freezing holds foods, but cannot improve their character. Prepare carefully under the cleanest possible conditions to avoid contamination. Work quickly and in small lots.

Freeze at or below 0-deg. F. — home freezers, rented freezers, rented freezer lockers and certain separate-door freezers maintain this temperature at all times. Freezer storage sections in many refrigerators may range as high as 20 deg. F. and should only be used for short-term storage.

When preparing meat or poultry for the freezer, choose a moisture proof wrap so that air will be sealed out and moisture locked in.

When air penetrates the package, moisture is drawn from the surface of the meat and the condition known as freezer burn develops. This freezer burn is the drying out of the surface tissues, giving the meat a white appearance. It is not harmful, but does make the dehydrated area tough and tasteless when cooked.

There are several good freezer wraps on the market —i.e. locker paper, moisture vapour-proof cellophane, laminated papers, plastic films and aluminum foil.

Freezer Storage Time Chart
(Freezer Temperature 0 deg. F. or below)

Meat (in freezer wrap)	Recommended Maximum Storage Time in Months
Beef Roasts, Staks	8—12
Lamb Roasts	6—8
Pork and Veal Roasts	4—5
Chops, Lamb, Pork, Veal	3—4
Ground Meats	2—3
Variety Meats	3—4
Pork—Cured, Smoked	1—2
Bacon	1—2
Sausages and Wieners	½—¾
Cooked Roasts	2—3
Cooked Meats, Stews, Meat Loaves	1—2
Whole Chicken, Turkey	8—10
Turkey, Chicken Pieces	5—6
Cooked Turkey, Chicken	2—3

Roasts should be packaged individually.

Steaks, chops and patties will separate more easily if folded freezer wrapping or waxed paper is placed between the pices.

Vacuum packaged products may be frozen in their original wrapper.

As with refrigerator storage times, freezer times will also vary due to the condition of the meat when frozen, wrapping material and method, rate of freezing and freezer storage temperature.

It is important to mark on each package the kind of meat, name of cut and date and to keep a record of the meat frozen so that no meat will be kept longer than the recommended strorage time.

In general, most meat and poultry may be frozen. However thickened gravies, sauces and some combination foods such as spaghetti are apt to break down in consistency when frozen. Stuffed poultry should not be frozen at home.

Thawing may take place in the refrigerator, at room temperature or during cooking. It is best to thaw meat and poultry in the wrapping to prevent evaporation of juices. Thawing times will vary due to differences in shape and size of cut. As a general rule, allow approximately 1-2 hours per pound at room temperature and 5-6 hours per pound in the refrigerator.

It is generally recommended that meat which is completely thawed should not be refrozen. Thawing, then refreezing, adversely affects the flavor, texture, appearance and in some cases the food value of a frozen food.

The changes, caused by the growth of bacteria during thawing will be more pronounced in foods that have not been handled under the best possible conditions.

However, if ice crystals are still present within the cut, it can be refrozen. Also, any frozen food that is cooked can be refrozen.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Therapist Suspect

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The advice you give, "seek professional help," is good, except for one hitch. One should check on any prospective therapist first.

I went to a kook whose office walls are festooned with degrees but he must have left his ethics behind in grade school. Three years and thousands of dollars later, I wound up with a divorce. The grounds? Adultery. The man? My therapist. (And I'm not even good looking.)

Therapy often causes women patients to "fall in love" with their doctors, but the competent (and ethical) psychiatrist knows how to handle this situation.

A little investigating later turned up the facts that my doctor was known for tomcatting around. He is still sitting around "helping" people, raking it in and no doubt putting out.

Me? I have a ruined marriage, two fatherless children and no money. Please print this. It might save some unsuspecting woman from my fate.—Bitter.

DEAR BITTER: Most therapists wouldn't touch a patient with a 10-foot pole. You just happened to get the local Lochinvar. However, you are in a better position than I am to "save some unsuspecting woman from the same fate." Report your doctor to the county medical society. He desperately needs therapy himself, and shouldn't be permitted to practice.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for nine years. We have four daughters, seven, five, four and two. We own our own business, own an average home, and drive an average late model car.

My wife is just about the most wonderful woman in the world. She's a great cook, an excellent housekeeper and a fine mother. She loves to work in the yard, seldom raises her voice or loses her temper and we get along beautifully.

Our children are exceptionally well-behaved and we have wonderful friends. My wife loves my folks, and I love hers.

My problem, Dear Abby, is that I am about to go completely out of my mind trying to figure out how a bum like me ever got into such a wonderful situation. Should I accept the fact that I am the luckiest guy in the world, or should I just keep trying to figure this thing out?—Dave In Eugene, Oregon.

DEAR DAVE: Accept it. And also knock on wood and bite your tongue.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were eager to entertain at home after our marriage last year. We have invited friends for cocktails, brunch, foreign meals, buffet dinners and after-theatre suppers. We were pleased with the high number of acceptances, and our guests always seemed to have a good time. As newlyweds we live in a small apartment in new high-rise building in the "city." But in spite of the limited area of entertaining, we have opened our doors to about 150 guests — some of them four or five times.

However, sadly, we must admit, only three couples have reciprocated thus far. The rest are still repeating meaningless phrases, like "drop in sometime," or, "we must get together soon."

Of course we don't intend to "drop in." We are dropping off — their names from our list of future guests. Isn't that the only answer?—Disappointed.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Yes, I think your "eagerness' to get into the social swim, you may have "gone off the deep end." To invite the same people four and five times without a reciprocal invitation from them appears to me as "social climbing." Stick with those who have returned your invitations. If you have only three couples who appreciate your company and hospitality, you're doing well.

DEAR ABBY: What is all this commotion about fat women? My wife is 30 pounds heavier than she was when we were married, but for crying out loud, she is also 30 years older. She is stylish and immaculate and she always has sense enough to wear the propr foundation garments.

She doesn't look as heavy as she is because she is never bouncing, sagging or bursting at the seams. Just because a woman is "fat" doesn't mean she has to be sloppy.—Papa Loves Mamma.

BUT SHALLOW WATER SITE URGED BY COURT

★★★

Florida Fails to Halt Nerve Gas Dumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal district judge refused today to forbid the sea-bottom burial of deadly nerve gas off the Florida coast.

But Judge June L. Green coupled her denial of a temporary restraining order with an "urgent request" that the United States defence department designat a different site for the dumping.

She said she had "serious misgivings" about the selected site. Sinking of a ship carrying the gas at a depth of 16,000 feet, she said, posed the danger of a sudden and simultaneous crushing of all of the concrete-encased gas containers.

Judge Green also noted testimony and affidavits submitted to her that this is the first time the U.S. Army had planned to dispose of gas at such a great depth.

She also noted that two years ago the army disposed of gas in 7,000 feet of water off the New Jersey coast and that later checks by navy scientists had revealed no detectable harm to marine life or anything.

The judge's action came on a complaint by the Environmental Defence Fund, a New York-based citizens' group, and joined by Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida.

WEATHER A PROBLEM

The weather, meanwhile, posed a further challenge to the army's plans to dump the 2,675 tons of gas in the Atlantic off Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The weather bureau in Miami reported a dangerous tropical depression with winds of 60 miles an hour approaching the Bahamas and Florida.

Although there were no present forecasts of a possible hurricane in the area, Dr. Robert H. Simpson, head of the National Hurricane Centre in Miami, said it was possible a hurricane "could come with great suddenness."

Lawyers for the fund said they would appeal Judge Green's decision immediately to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the district of Columbia.

There was no immediate indication, moreover, about the reaction of the defence department and the army to the judge's request that they seek another disposal site "at a reasonable distance" from Sunny Point, N.C., the port of embarkation.

PLANS CONTINUE

At Sunny Point, where the loading of the 418 steel- and concrete-encased nerve gas rockets was proceeding, navy Capt. A. G. Hamilton, commander of the sea phase of the operation, said he was watching the tropical depression carefully and would not move out of port if it became a threat to the burial area.

Hamilton said the tugs would not begin pulling the ship to sea until they had a 96-hour forecast of good weather. He said the operation would remain in port until such a forecast was made.

If the weather is favorable, Hamilton said he hopes to get the operation under way late Saturday. However, the loading of the caskets was running slightly behind schedule and might not be completed until Sunday, he said.

NO DANGER, SAYS U.K.

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain announced today that American plans to dump nerve gas off the Florida coast will cause no appreciable harmful effect aside from localized damage to marine life.

The foreign office released the conclusions of a report of a team of British experts which discussed the dumping problem with U.S. officials

COMMON ENERGY POLICY URGED

MONTREAL — Canada and the United States should form a common policy on continental energy resources, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel told a Montreal news conference here Thursday.

He was commenting on Canadian guidelines for oil development in the north announced in Ottawa Thursday. See story on Page 2.

CANADA POLICY

Oil Imports Face Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene announced today new regulations requiring importers of motor gasoline for use anywhere in Canada to get licences from the national energy board — a step to reinforce the government's national oil policy.

The announcement follows months of controversy over the market effects of cheaper imported oil and gasoline on the Alberta-produced oil refined in Eastern Canada by the major oil companies.

NOW IN EFFECT

Under the new regulations which went into effect Thursday, the national energy board will have to judge whether certain applications to import motor gasoline are consistent with the development of Canada's own oil resources.

On May 7, the national energy board imposed a ban on sales of imported gasoline west of the Ottawa Valley but this ban was ruled unconstitutional by the Exchequer Court earlier this month.

The court decision allowed Cal Oil Inc, of Montreal to import gasoline, apparently from Spain.

Greene today said the objectives of the national oil policy are still valid. The government was trying a new approach.

ALSO VENEZUELA

The board is also trying to stop the flow of Montreal-refined gasoline from Venezuela west of the Ottawa Valley dividing line.

The Exchequer Court decision by Mr. Justice W. R. Jackett, the court's president, did not affect the voluntary arrangement keeping gasoline and other products refined in Montreal from Venezuelan imported crude out of the region west of the Ottawa area.

That agreement was made in 1961 at the time the national oil policy was announced. However, there is some movement of gasoline into Eastern Ontario.

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and other companies have said they are reducing production at Ontario refineries using Alberta crude because of stiffer competition from lower-price and Montreal-refined gasoline.

NDP SEES RESOURCES 'SELL-OUT'

OTTAWA (CP) — T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, accused Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin today of trying to intimidate the national energy board into approving a huge export of natural gas to the United States.

He said at a news conference the federal government is preparing a further sell-out of Canadian energy resources to the U.S.

He said Pepin has stated publicly the energy board ought to approve the export of $3 billion worth of natural gas to the U.S.

Schools Squeeze To Continue

QUESNEL (CP) — Education Minister Donald Brothers said Thursday the provincial government will continue for another year to restrict school construction to essentials.

"Money markets are still as tight as ever, if not tighter," he said. "Interest rates have not come down."

He said he has given this message to school board officials: "We don't want palaces built. We want functional schools not cheap schools, but effective, efficient, well-built schools."

He also said he is trying to persuade school boards to look at the idea of consolidating school districts to reduce staff.

"We are being over-governed in B.C. We have too many officials, too many secretary-treasurers, too many superintendents."

Th' carpenters saw an opportunity t' hammer out an agreement, but nobody really got nailed.

IT'S ONLY A PAPER WAR but up until the Manitoba legislature was prorogued Thursday after the longest session in its history, these two combatants, NDP labor minister A. R. Paulley (left) and Gil Molgat, former provincial Liberal leader, fought it out in earnest in political debates. Paper fight is traditional after the end of the legislative session. ANTI-INFLATIONARY policies by Ottawa are paying off, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Thursday, in hailing the unusually slow rate of increase in the consumer price index. The index rose by one-half of one per cent in July from June. For details see Page 10.

Brazilian Next Say Kidnappers

MONTEVIDEO (AP) — The Uruguayan government studied today an unauthenticated message found in a Buenos Aires cafe which indicated the Tupamaro guerrillas might murder the Brazilian diplomat they kidnapped. The message made no mention of American agronomist Claude L. Fly, who was kidnapped last Friday.

Officials in Montevideo could not confirm the authenticity of the note found in the Argentine capital 150 miles up the Plate estuary. But it contained language similar to that used in 10 previous messages from the urban Tupamaros, and it was delivered in the same manner—left in the restroom of a cafe.

The communique said Dan Mitrione, the kidnapped American police adviser whose body was found Monday, had been sentenced to death for "collaborating with the forces of repression."

It said the process of "revolutionary justice" for Brazilian Consul Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide, 41, could be halted if the Uruguayan government released about 150 prisoners demanded as ransom for the Tupamaros.

An earlier message, relayed to authorities Tuesday, said Dias Gomide and Fly, a 65-year-old consultant working for the agriculture ministry, both were in good health and had not been sentenced yet.

The later note said the Dias Gomide represented "one of the bloodiest dictatorships in America, whose tortures and assassinations go to such limits that they have been denounced by the justice commission of the United Nations."

The note said the government bears "total and absolute responsibility" for Mitrione's murder.

Cyclamates Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — The sale of all foods containing cyclamates will be banned by Sept. 1, the health department said today.

Mid-East Ceasefire Deteriorates As Israeli Jets Pound Jordan

JERUSALEM (CP)—Israeli air force planes struck at Jordanian army positions today, the military command said, in further deterioration of the Middle East ceasefire.

The command said the raid was launched against Jordanian army strongholds which have given assistance to Palestinian guerrillas in attacks against Israeli frontier settlements.

A spokesman had announced earlier that Israeli air force jets crossed the border today and bombed and strafed Arab guerrilla targets inside Jordan for the second straight day.

The Tel Aviv spokesman said those raids were in response to mortar attacks on two Jewish settlements.

The planes all returned safely after hitting objectives adjacent to Israel's Beisan Valley, he said. Beisan Valley settlements of Maoz Haim and Yardena came under mortar fire Thursday night, but no damage was reported.

This was the second Israeli air strike inside Jordan since the Middle East ceasefire went into effect a week ago. The guerrilla organizations have disowned the truce initiated by the United States as a preliminary to peace talks.

Carpenters Sign Pact

Crucial Break In Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 9,000-member carpenters union and the Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for 600 British Columbia building contractors, today announced signing of a new two-year contract.

A joint statement by the union and the CLRA said the agreement adopted proposals made two weeks ago by deputy labor minister William Sands, who acted as mediator.

The new contract, running to March 31, 1972, provides an increase of $1.38 an hour in wages and fringe benefits, spread over the two years.

The agreement already approved by secret ballot of union members and CLRA member-organizations — is seen as crucial in the B.C. dispute, which saw work almost completely stopped through the province for three months.

The former base rate for carpenters — including fringes —was $5.03 an hour. This increases to $6.41 in the final stage of the two-year agreement.

The carpenters will get an immediate increase of 45 cents, retroactive to June 1. Additional increases during the contract will be 37 cents Oct. 1, 36 cents April 1, 1971, and 20 cents Oct. 1, 1971.

The carpenters union was the largest of 10 locked out by the contractors' association last spring. A total of 25,000 construction workers were locked out or on strike during the three-month stoppage that ended July 27.

INTERVENTION

Work was resumed after the provincial government invoked compulsory arbitration sections of the B.C. Mediation Commission Act, which ordered the unions back to the job.

Most of the unions indicated they would not return, but after personal intervention by Premier Bennett and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, the two sides agreed to go back to work and submit their disputes to mediation by Deputy Labor Minister Sands.

Since then, six unions have voted to reject Sands's proposals for settlement.

ANTI-POLLUTION DRIVE THREATENS US: FIR

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Council of the Forest Industries of British Columbia said Thursday the future of the industry would be threatened by the enforecement of strict anti-pollution measures.

A brief, presented by council president Gordon Draeseke to a public hearing of the pollution control branch, said any control measures adopted by the provincial government must be feasible for the forest industry to implement.

The brief said that standards of pollution control should be set for each individual forest operation instead of for the industry generally.

Pulp Workers Call Walkout

A strike that would close down eight more B.C. pulp mills has been set for midnight Wednesday.

Pat O'Neal, spokesman for the Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, said in Prince George the strike would begin when the term of provincial mediator Gus Leonidas expires.

Involved are 5,700 members of the Brotherhood and more than 1,200 members of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers union.

The men are employed at MacMillan Bloedel plants at Powell River and Port Alberni; Crown Zellerbach mills at Elk Falls and Ocean Falls; Rayonier mills at Port Alice and Port Mellon on Howe Sound; Northwood Pulp in Prince George; and Kamloops Pulp and Paper.

Eight other pulp mills have been shut down since July 24 as a result of a strike by 4,200 members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. The mills are at Crofton, Harmac, Gold River, Woodfibre, Prince George (2), Castlegar and Skookumchuk.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson has reminded construction workers that any walkouts they may have in mind would be illegal.

. . . PULP STRIKE

Peterson, in Houston, B.C., Thursday to open what is expected to become the world's largest sawmill, said binding arbitration sections of Bill 33 would be invoked if building trades unions took strike action.

Local 170 of the Plumbers' Union served 72-hour strike notice on three lower mainland contractors Wednesday, although the union said it had no immediate plans to strike.

Bill 33 empowers the government to order a return to work when the public interest is threatened, with violations punishable by fines of up to $1,000 to individuals and $10,000 to employers or unions.

The Bulkley Valley mill opened by Peterson cost $25 million, and is expected to reach its top production capacity of 270 million board feet in 18 months.

In the forest industry Thursday the International Woodworkers of America and MacMillan Bloedel jointly announced a study aimed at promoting better labor relations to avoid wildcat strikes and other shutdown tactics.

The study was announced by IWA regional president Jack Moore and MacMillan Bloedel vice-president Robert Bonner.

NEGOTIATIONS

It will get under way as soon as current contract negotiations allow parties to draw up an agenda.

Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Appeals Court is currently working on a report that will contain recommendations for settlement of the dispute between 27,000 members of the coast IWA and 116 employers.

The union has served strike notice on companies, and the companies in turn have served lockout notice, with both sides waiting for the Nemetz proposals.

WILL STRIKE

Meanwhile, some 270 lumber inspectors, members of the IWA, have said they will strike at 8 a.m. Monday if a dispute involving use of a new automated planer at Port Alberni isn't cleared up.

The matter is considered of such importance that IWA president Ronald Roley of Portland, Ore. has been called to Vancouver to help resolve the question, which is whether lumber inspectors or others have jurisdiction over the machine.

Ottawa 'Ignoring' B.C. Cities

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell today criticized the federal government for weighting its urban aid in favor of provinces which already benefit from other equalization programs.

Campbell's remarks were made at a press conference prior to leaving for Winnipeg, where he will attend a conference of provincial ministers of municipal affairs and their deputies.

Campbell said federal Liberal MPs are failing to put forward the case for B.C. cities which are as much in need of federal help in solving urban problems as are the cities of Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

He said it is "a little thick" that Ottawa should disperse income tax collections from B.C. to help poorer areas and then fail to give B.C. a fair share of other separate spending programs.

Federal cabinet ministers from B.C. should "just for once" put forward the B.C. view, Campbell said, adding:

"The rest of the mice down there who aren't cabinet ministers, you can't even hear them squeak."

ISHERWOOD'S TREE SAVED, PARTIALLY

Saanich Ald. Foster Isherwood's tree on Dallas Road will be saved — at least some of it.

City council heard a report from the parks department Thursday that everything above 15 feet should go. But it was up to council to do this or remove the tree entirely. The parks department had said earlier the tree is in a dangerous condition.

It was agreed that the tree, at 104 Dallas Road, "be put in a safe condition."

Earlier, Isherwood, a Victoria lawyer, said in an interview he believed a portion of the tree could remain.

Store Launches Anti-Litter Drive

Canada Safeway Ltd. has announced a five-province anti-litter campaign.

The two-month effort will be directed to employees in the provinces where Safeway operates — British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario — and to customers.

The company emphasizes that individual effort is required to reduce the litter problem.

Press Dispute To Mediation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Mediation Commission today announced it has appointed Clark Gilmour of Vancouver to mediate contract disputes between four daily newspapers and unions representing typographers and printing pressmen.

The disputes involve Local 226 of the Vancouver Typographical Union and Local 25 of the Vancouver Printing Pressmen and the Nanaimo Free Press, the Kelowna Courier, the Penticton Herald and the Vernon News.

At issue are all aspects of the separate contracts between the unions and the newspapers, including wages and working conditions.

Postal Talks End in Failure

OTTAWA (CP) — The week's rally in bargaining between the federal treasury board and the Council of Postal Unions fell short of a settlement in negotiations today.

While spokesmen for both sides denied negotiations are once more in deadlock, each indicated it was up to the other side to make the next move. No time was fixed for another meeting.

MATCH SENDS FIREMEN RACING

RAMSGATE, England (UPI) — Computing centre employee Jimmy Barrett lit his pipe and sent firemen from neighboring communities racing to their trucks. A firm spokesman said Barrett's match had accidentally set off a new sensitive electronic fire alarm.

"At least we know the alarm works," the spokesman said. "But we may have to ban smoking near it."

THE WEATHER

Sunny days are here to stay, for the weekend at any rate.

According to the weather office at Victoria International Airport a ridge of high pressure over lower B.C. will bring sunny weather and warm temperatures to Victoria Saturday and Sunday.

The high for the weekend will be in the low 70s and winds will be generally light. Westerly winds of 15 to 20 miles per hour are forecast for the Strait of Juan de Fuca Saturday afternoon.

Hickel Pushes Pact on Energy

Times News Services

MONTREAL — U.S. Interior Secretary walter Hickel believes Canada and the United States should form common policy on continental energy resources.

Hickel, who left today for a tour of the Canadain Arctic accompanied by Canadian Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, told a news conference here Thursday that any such agreement would "only be good if it's good for both countries."

"I look forward to a North America energy policy that will take in all forms of energy — atomic, coal, gas, water or whatever," he told newsmen.

However, he said he considered oil imports an entirely different matter, "based on other criteria," and conceded that the U.S. doesn't produce enough oil for the American domestic market.

GUIDELINES

In Ottawa Thursday, Chretien and Industry Minister J. J. Greene announced guidelines for future construction of oil and gas pipelines in the North, governing pollution control, Canadian ownership, and employment of northern residents.

A joint news conference was told major gas and oil companies have expressed an interest in constructing pipelines but that only one trunk line each for oil and gas in the North would be permitted.

A "corridor" for the initial pipelines would be established at a future date.

In a formal statement, the ministers said the guides will apply to all pipelines tapping oil and gas resources north of the 60th degree of latitude in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and in Alaska.

- The energy and northern development ministers will act as a "point of contact" between industry and government to guide prospective applicants wishing to build pipelines.
- Only one trunk oil pipeline and one trunk gas pipeline will be allowed in the North within a designated "corridor."
- Each of these lines will provide "common carrier" service at published tariffs or a "contract carrier service" at a negotiated price;
- Northern pipelines, like those in all other areas of the country, will be under the jurisdiction of the federal government.
- Means of providing Canadians with a "substantial opportunity" for participating in the financing, engineering, construction, ownership and management of the pipelines will play an important part in the government's consideration of applications.
- The National Energy Board will ensure that any applicant gives satisfactory assurances that pollution will be prevented and that the rights of northern residents and freedom of navigation will be preserved.
- Applicants must provide specific programs for employment of residents of the North both during construction and operation.

BENNETT POLE 'UNFUNNY' SAYS INDIAN

A carving of Premier W. A. C. Bennett atop a totem pole at Hazelton is "sacirilege." the administrator of the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs said Thursday.

Bill Wilson said he was in Hazelton Wednesday when the totem pole was raised during a visit there by the provincial cabinet.

The carving, atop a column of traditional Indian figures, shows Bennett in a top hat, bow tie and frock coat.

"If it's a joke, it's a terribly unfunny joke," said Wilson, a former University of Victoria student who will be studying law at the University of B.C. this fall.

City Agrees To Gorge Work

Victoria city council agreed Thursday to start the ball rolling on a joint approach to improving Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterway.

Council will advise Saanich it favors a joint meeting between Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt to consider the future of the area, and to implement plans if they are found favorable.

"The beautification of the Gorge is something to behold," said Ald. Peter Pollen.

But on a rising tide, the "filth and sewage" from the Inner Harbor forms a "major health problem," he said. The city should study this.

Ald. Harold Olafson pointed out that under the five-year capital budget, authorization is contained to borrow money to eliminate discharge of raw sewage into the Inner Harbor by connecting it to pipes leading to marine outfalls.

In other business, council:

- Expressed "deep concern" that the attorneys-general of Canada and B.C. were not represented at the hearings into the planned ending of passenger railway service between Courtenay and Victoria in view of legal obligations in the past involving land grants;
- Asked the engineer to repair the closed toilets at the Imperial Oil service station on the Causeway and negotiate with the company over the costs;
- Supported Saanich and Esquimalt councils in pressing for a federal study on enlarging the drydock to handle major ships now being built;
- Placed itself on record as supporting any effort Saanich Peninsula municipalities take to maintain bus service by Vancouver Island Coach Lines, which has applied to the Public Utilities Commission to discontinue service to Cordova Bay, West Saanich, Sidney and Deep Cove.

Coast Guard Rescues Passengers

VANCOUVER (UPI) — The pilot of a float-equipped aircraft with 11 persons on board made a precautionary landing in the Strait of Georgia Thursday when it developed engine trouble shortly after take-off from Vancouver harbor.

An Air West Airlines Ltd., official said pilot Bert Creasy noticed the single-engine otter was losing power minutes after lift-off and he decided to set the plane down in the rough waters.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutters Rider and Moorhen rushed to his assistance. The passengers were taken aboard the Moorhen and the two cutters towed the plane back to Vancouver.

The passengers were taken to Vancouver General Hospital for a check-up. None required treatment.

The passengers, all Canadian businessmen, were on a charter flight to Nanaimo.

Public Demand Greater Than Company's Supply

MONTREAL (CP) — Being second-best in competitive business is not so bad when public demand for a product is greater than the supply.

That, at least, is the position in which Giffen Recreation Ltd. finds itself in the ballooning snowmobile fanufacturing industry.

Yves Noel, vice-president of marketing for the Montreal-based firm, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Giffen Industries Inc. of Miami, Fla., said that last year his firm produced about 56,000 vehicles.

This placed Giffen Recreation slightly ahead of Arctic Enterprises, a Minnesota-based firm that produced 54,000 vehicles. Bombardier Ltd. of Valcourt, Que. remains the kingpin of the industry, however, manufacturing 180,000 vehicles last year, up from 114,000 the year before.

"Although we account for about 15 per cent of all snowmobile manufacturing, the industry at the moment resembles the automobile business in the 1930s," Mr. Noel said in an interview.

"There are about 65 companies making snowmobiles now. It is estimated that in the next three years, this number will be consolidated to about 10 manufacturers and there will be even fewer within five years.

"By that time, Giffen Recreation hopes to account for about 26 or 27 per cent of the total production."

It was through consolidation that Giffen Recreation achieved its own strong position within the industry. In recent years, it acquired control of manufacturing facilities at La Guadeloupe, Que., La Pocatière, Que., Princeville, Que., and Hawkesbury, Ont., where snowmobiles are produced under the trade names Boa-Ski, Moto-Ski and Sno-Prince.

Mr. Noel said that future expansion is expected to be geared to development fibreglass, upholstery, plastic and rubber manufacturing facilities. A long-range plan calls for production of motors. Giffen Recreation, like most of the industry, buys motors from European companies.

In noting the growth potential of the industry, Mr. Noel referred to a report drawn up earlier this year by Andreson and Co., a New York research firm.

QUEBEC BUYS MOST

The Andreson report estimates that North America is developing a minimum demand for one million vehicles a year.

This would be centred in Canada and 15 northern states in the U.S. where snowmobiles have practical use. The industry is not expected to reach such a manufacturing capacity until the winter of 1972-73.

The report says he highest concentration of snowmobiles is in Quebec where nearly one in every five homeowners in rural areas owns a vehicle. The province shows a sales growth of 20 per cent annually and about 60,000 are expected to be sold here this year.

Mr. Noel said Giffen Recreation will produce about 100,000 snowmobiles this year—57 per cent to be sold in the U.S., 42 per cent in Canada and one per cent in Europe.

"There are only 16,000 snowmobiles in Europe so far so it wouldn't pay us to build a plant there yet because, at the moment, you can buy a car just as cheaply. Our price ranges are between $595 and $1,495."

Pending Securities and Exchange Commission approval in the United States, Mr. Noel said that 570,000 or 20 per cent of Giffen Recreation's outstanding shares are to be offered publicly either next October or November. About 190,000 are to be offered to Canadian investors. The offering will be at $1 par value.

TORONTO (CP) — Simpsons Ltd. and Simpson-Sears Ltd. report declines in earnings of about 53 per cent for Simpsons Ltd. and 49 per cent for Simpsons-Sears.

Total sales for Simpsons Ltd., the retail store company, were off less than one per cent. Sales for Simpsons-Sears, the catalogue sales company, 43-percent owned by Simpsons Ltd., were up 2.6 per cent.

Simpsons Ltd. earnings for the six months ended July 8 were $2,987,938 compared with earnings of $4,569,992 during the six months ended July 9, 1969. First-half sales this year were $129,686,714 and last year they were $130,682,202.

Simpsons-Sears Ltd. had first-half earnings of $2,877,000 this year and $4,190,000 last year. First half sales were $280,692,000 this year and $273,579,000 last year.

Earnings per share for Simpsons Ltd. for the first-half this year were 17.2 cents and last year 25.6 cents. Comparable figures for Simpsons-Sears were 19 cents and 27 cents.

SALES DECLINE

The Simpsons Ltd. report said the decline in earnings was due to "slightly lower sales combined with increased operating expenses."

The Simpsons-Sears report blamed "higher than normal merchandising losses" taken to clear warehouses of seasonal items.

The Simpsons Ltd. report was based on a new accounting system for inclusion of profits from Simpsons-Sears. Previously, dividends from the catalogue company were included in the Simpsons Ltd. report but this year the equity in earnings was stated. Last year's earnings were restated for comparison.

Simpsons Ltd. dividends from Simpsons-Sears for the first half totalled $1,584,000 this year and $1,452,000 last year. A spokesman said dividends were based on an annual projection of earnings.

The equity in earnings — about 43 per cent of Simpsons-Sears earnings — amounted to $1,225,417 for the first half this year and $1,799,114 for the first half last year.

Loblaw Chief Changes Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Leon Weinstein says he will resign as president of Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd. and will take on a job as director of public relations and consumer affairs in the Loblaw chain.

"The job is a terrific challenge," he said.

He said there is so much work to be done in consumer affairs and it can't "all be left to the government."

Weinstein said the job will involve closing a "credibility gap" between consumers, wholesalers and retailers.

Weinstein became president of Loblaw in June, 1968, succeeding George Metcalf.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade was generally light at the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, with most of the buying activity centred in rapeseed and rhe.

Rye posted solid gains, as offers continued to meet good shipper absorption.

The Canadian Wheat Board announced an increase of ½ cent in oats, and ¾ cents in barleys one feed and lower. Malting barleys down to and including 3 C.W. 6-row are down 1½ cents and 3 C.W. 2-row, and one, two and three feed were down two cents.

Lakehead prices for class two and IGA wheat were all down ¼ cent.

Aquacare Signs Pact to Produce Products in Italy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Aquacare International Ltd., a Vancouver-based firm producing equipment to clean and sterilize water using ultra-violet rays and carbon filters, has announced an agreement for manufacture and distribution of its products in Italy.

Company president Gordon W. Robertson said the exclusive licence arrangement, Aquacare's first in Europe, calls for minimum royalties of $1,275,000 over the next 10 years.

He also announced the acquisition of Cerco Chemicals Ltd. of Toronto, which has developed a "plastic chlorine exchange resin" produced in small pellets which permit the control of chlorine levels without valves, meters or other mechanical devices.

DIVORCE MYTHS

A Necessary Evil —Separate Ways

By Jack Scott

If somebody at a party, say, were to point out Marney Stevenson and tell you that she'd broken up more homes than any other woman in Victoria you might wonder how a nice girl like that went astray.

Fact is that Marney is a lawyer, perhaps the busiest in Victoria's divorce courts, herself 20 happy years in the matrimonial ring, mother of two and a woman who looks upon her specialty almost as a necessary evil.

Scott

"Often it's the only way out of an impossible situation," she will tell you, "but every divorce can be described as a defeat of human relations. When it's a defended action it can be an emotional, terrible, heart-breaking thing. I always feel that if I go to court on a defended divorce I've in some way failed."

An attractive, vibrant woman with laser-beam blue eyes, Marney left a lawyer's office as secretary in 1948 and emerged from university seven years later to article in Victoria. In the past five years, though she hadn't planned it this way, her professional life has been a steady round of divorces, separations, working out maintenance arragements, custody of the children and those other messy results of marriage-on-the-rocks.

"A clientele like this comes mainly from word-of-mouth and because so often people with family problems tend to group together," she explains. "The other night, for instance, I went into the Strathcona for a drink after work. There was a table with six women and a man at it. I suddenly realized that I'd been legally involved in the matrimonial affairs of each of them."

There are, it seems, a surprising number of inaccurate generalities and accepted myths about divorce that amuse or irritate every lawyer in the field.

★ ★ ★

Myth: Victoria is a quiet little backwater of older, contented couples who'd rather fight than switch. ("Nonsense," says Marney. "There's no lawyer in Vancouver any busier than I am in Victoria. On a per capita basis the divorce rate here may be higher than anywhere else in Canada. It is certainly not less."

Myth: Nine out of every 10 divorces are granted to women against men. '("Absolutely false," says Marney. "For every three women who are granted a divorce there are two men. You might imagine that my own clients would be mostly women, perhaps thinking that a woman lawyer would be more sympathetic with their problems, but, in fact, for every woman who walks through that door there's a man.")

Myth: The early years of marriage are the dangerous years and economic problems, wrangling over where the money goes, are the hang-ups that most often cause separation. ("There's only one basic cause for divorce: People," says Marney. "In marriage, every year is the dangerous year. Certainly rushing into it without experience may lead to divorce, but just as significant a group are those of 40 and over. Very often they've been so busy and involved in having kids, getting established and working, that when the kids have grown and gone they look at each other, really look at each other, for the first time in 20 years, and find they can't stand each other.

"As for economic problems, sure, they're often a factor, but today there are as many people in the upper-income brackets getting divorces as in the lower-income brackets. No, the cause is people and the kind of society we're living in today.")

Myth: Women invariably weep at the moment of legal parting, whatever thay may have thought of the clod they divorced. ("Generalizing again," says Marney. "There are women who come from the court with tears streaming down their face, but as many more are radiant and can't wait to get you over to the Cherry Bank for a victory drink. Often, too, there's genuine hate, particularly in the financial settlement, and a woman with hate doesn't cry.")

Myth: Women will generally put up with a bad marriage for the sake of the children. "It's more often the thinking of the husband," says Marney. "Men will often stay with wives they can't stand because of the possibility of losing day-to-day contact with the children if he moves out. Most husbands have the mistaken idea that the courts will automatically grant the wife custody of the children and it's a common thing for them to stay on rather than risk that.")

Marney dismisses the idea that a woman lawyer, or a man, for that matter, can do much in the way of repairing a shattered partnership.

★ ★ ★

"It's part of our duty, set out in the Divorce Act, to advise on the possibilities of reconciliation and to suggest what marriage counselling or guidance is available," she explains, "but counselling involves counselling both sides and under our adversary system you can't see both. I tell my clients what their situation is, from a legal point of view, and tell them it's up to them to make up their mind. Its a matter of discretion. If a woman comes in black and blue with bruises or has been separated for 15 years there's not much point in suggesting a marriage counsellor. On the other hand, I can sense if a man or woman has made a final decision. Very often I say to myself, 'That one isn't going to break up, at least not yet'."

Like most liberal-minded lawyers Marne was for the easing of Canada's divorce laws that came into effect better than two years ago. Until then the only legal grounds (except for the rarely-encountered sodomy and bestiality sections) were that the innocent party sued the adulterous party. Now, of course, a three-year separation, as well as other evidence of matrimonial offences or marriage break-up, are sufficient.

"More divorces? Yes, though not as many as you might expect. But that," says Marney, blue eyes flashing, "is not the important question. The question is: are there more marriage breakdowns? This we don't know. We are still coping with the thousands and thousands of people whose marriages were completely ended, but couldn't be legally ended.

"Any lawyer can tell you of cases to show why the laws needed liberalizing. Not long ago I got a divorce for a man of 76 years of age who was separated from his wife in 1920 when she went back to England. He started to live with another woman in 1929, raised her family, by a previous marriage, was a devoted husband and father for 40 years, but, until now, was outside the law. Certainly we need an even more liberal approach. It should be enough if the parties are separated for one year, rather then three. What chance is there for reconciliation after a year? But at least we've come this far."

Swartz Bay Delays Now Common

Lines of traffic winding back from the terminal at Swartz Bay to Wain Road on the Pat Bay Highway is becoming a common sight these days as motorists wait —some as long as five hours —to board B.C. ferries.

With travel up and the "stretch" ferry Queen of Victoria out of commission since her Active Pass collision, travellers are resigned to long unscheduled sightseeing stops at terminal approaches.

B.C. Ferries traffic manager Bob Innes said delays are "certainly a problem" since the Queen of Victoria was damaged.

She carried 192 cars while her replacement, the Queen of Sidney, carries 110 cars, or a loss of 82 cars per sailing.

He said the Queen of Victoria is expected back in service Sept. 4 after repairs in Vancouver.

Bridge Snarls To Ease Soon

By PETER McNELLY

Rush hour traffic jams near Johnson Street Bridge should be eliminated within a year.

The City of Victoria plans to re-structure the present flow of traffic over the bridge as part of the capital budget urban renewal program.

The plan works in three parts. Johnson Street, already slated to be one-way from Douglas to Vancouver, will be converted to a one-way street feeding into the city from the Johnson Street Bridge.

Pandora, also marked out as a one-way artery, will be extended to the bridge across and possibly over Store Street.

Right now, Pandora ends at Store.

Once extended, Pandora will carry one-way traffic toward the bridge from the downtown area.

The third part of the scheme involves the linking together of Wharf and Store Streets. Current plans involve a multi-levelled intersection to prevent the Wharf-Store link from jamming the flow on Pandora and Johnson.

APPROVAL NECESSARY

Council approval is still necessary for the scheme, but approval in principle already exists. The project was included among others in the city planning department's interim report on Inner Harbor renewal which council adopted in November 1969.

The Pandora extension will have to pass through property now owned by the CPR, the site of the E & N terminal on the east side of the bridge.

City officials say they do not expect any difficulty in acquiring the property because the CPR's main railway yards are on the other side of the bridge.

WILL MOVE TERMINAL

And whatever the Canadian Transport Commission decides on the E & N application to stop Dayliner passenger service, the CPR — which owns the E & N — plans to phase out its terminal.

If the Transport Commission rules that the Dayliner must continue, the CPR will move the terminal over to its main railway yard.

If the commission allows the application to discontinue service, the terminal is useless. Either way, the city does not face a difficult land acquisition problem.

Most of the remaining lands on the east side of the bridge are city-owned.

Council will consider details of the scheme and other urban renewal projects for the Inner Harbor once the planning department's final report is completed. This should be before the end of this year.

Funds for the Inner Harbor renewal program can be made available up to $850,000, the amount the city is permitted to borrow under the capital budget package.

Salmonella Test Covers 959 Samples

A total of 959 samples were examined for traces of the organism that causes salmonella by the laboratory at Royal Jubilee Hospital following the outbreak of the disease in June, said Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's administrator.

Pickles said the laboratory investigates about 250 cultures a month in routine laboratory investigations of enteric infections.

The samples were taken from human feces, swabs of kitchen appliances and food suspected of harboring the bacteria.

The public health staff collected samples from persons who complained of salmonella symptoms after a June 13 banquet at the Empress Hotel from hotel employees who might be possible carriers.

According to Dr. J. L. Whitebread, senior medical officer with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, the source of the outbreak was either a carrier or the food. The turkey served at the meal produced positive swabs for salmonella.

Judge's Heart Not So Soft As Ice Cream

By STEVE HUME

It was a hot day and the pint brick of ice cream was already starting to melt.

But Keith Pearson, 19, of 3485 Henderson Road, still had one stop to make at the Oak Bay police station and the ice cream wasn't going to wait.

There was only one thing to do. Eat on the run.

Pearson dug into his bocket for a knife and began using it as a spoon — rather a slick move in the face of a potentially sticky emergency.

●

The last thing he expected on that hot July 11 afternoon was that he would shortly be seized by Oak Bay police and wind up before Judge William Ostler in provincial court today charged with a serious criminal offence.

As Pearson sauntered into the station house eating his ice cream the eagle eyes of the officer on duty identified the utensil as a small switch-balde knife — a prohibited weapon under Canadian law.

He told court he didn't know the knife was prohibited.

He said he used it in his work, which required the opening and use of a knife with one hand.

●

"Ignorance of the law," Ostler said, "is no defence."

Pearson shrugged.

"It's either guilty or not guilty. Like I pleaded not guilty, but let's make it fast."

"It seems clear that he did not know it was illegal. Here he was, walking into the jaws of the lion in a careless manner," said the judge.

"There's no suggestion that you're a criminal," he said in fining Pearson $10.

City Uncertain On CPR Leases

City officials said today they are uncertain whether the CPR has received renewal of a foreshore lease on two parcels of Inner Harbor land.

The parcels include property at the foot of Menzies Street and the CPR's new ferry dock at the foot of Oswego.

Following a Thursday meeting of Victoria council, city solicitor T. P. O'Grady has been instructed to ask the federal department of transport:

- Whether the DOT has or has not yet granted renewal of the lease which expired on April 19, 1970.
- Whether the CPR has fulfilled its obligations with the DOT in the way it has sought renewal.

Ald. Peter Pollen charged that the lease had been renewed without consultation with city officials. Pollen's information about the lease came from a carefully-worded letter from the DOT to the city which seemed to imply that the lease had been renewed.

But close reading of the letter, says one city official, makes it impossible to tell whether the lease has been renewed or not.

"Why the mystery?" asked Pollen today. "Is the CPR beyond the control of the federal government? Why does this have to go on behind the scenes in Ottawa?"

City hall sources say that if the CPR has fulfilled certain clauses in its agreement with the DOT, the lease can be renewed without recommendation from the city.

One of these clauses provides that the CPR has to make formal application for renewal in the three months prior to the expiration of the lease.

This would be the three months before April 19. Pollen has said he does not believe the CPR ever made a formal application within the three months prior to the April expiry date.

This issue is important, he says, because it means the DOT will have to listen to the city's views on the CPR lease before granting renewal.

The lands covered by the lease include property at the foot of Menzies Street and the CPR's new ferry docks further down the harbor.

What upsets Pollen is that the CPR has sub-let the space near Menzies to Undersea Gardens.

A new 21-year lease on this land, says Pollen, would mean continuation of "commercial prostitution" of Inner Harbor.

Aldermen Thwart Bid To Save Begbie Street Trees

A last-ditch stand by the Save the Trees Campaign failed at city council Thursday.

Council supported an earlier committee recommendation that work proceed on the four-lane road, with the exception that the boulevard trees on the north side of Begbie between Belmont and Stanley will be saved.

The project, however, will be watch-dogged by a committee after Ald. Clyde Savage said he wants to look over the plans.

"We should be assured just what exactly" will happen in the Stadacona Park area, he said.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said the sidewalk by Stadacona Park will be relocated within the park to minimize encroachment by the widened road, which local residents said will be eight feet.

★ ★ ★

Council's agreement with the earlier committee recommendation came without discussion after several residents were allowed earlier to restate opposition to the road project,

Campaign spokesman Richard Morris urged all work be stopped for a full study and that to give cars priority in city planning is shortsighted and puts Victoria on the route to being another New York, Pittsburgh or Los Angeles. He said 1,327 signatures have been obtained in his campaign.

Mrs. L. D. McClintock complained that road plans were billed earlier as simply "major road improvements." Now it was road widening to four lanes "and who's it going to benefit? Not the people in Victoria, but Saanich."

Arthur Mayse . . .

LIKE IT OR NOT, THE top man on British Columbia's totem is Premier William Andrew Cecil Bennett. That fact was made manifest in carved cedarwood at New Hazelton this week, when tribesmen raised a fine pole to mark the opening of 'Ksan Indian Cultural Centre.

That's all very well, and nobody can deny that our provincial government matched the $36,000 raised by the bands dollar for dollar. But I suggest the honor bestowed on totem-topper Bennett might better have gone to Mrs. Polly Sargent.

If it hadn't been for Mrs. Sargent of New Hazelton, the Indian past might never have been reconstructed on a point of land where the Skeena and Kispiox rivers meet.

With Indian help, but otherwise almost single-handed, Polly Sargent stocked and maintained a museum not far from 38-acre cultural centre tract.

It was from her collection, and with her urging, that the dream of a cultural centre took wing.

Perhaps a trifle of space on the totem should also have been reserved for Victoria's Dr. David B. Turner, former deputy minister of recreation and conservation, who did much to further the dream.

In passing, let me note that Premier Bennett is not the first white man to figure on a totem. On a pole in the Provincial Museum, you will find a sailor in the uniform of a century and more ago.

History doesn't record his name, but he stands depicted in enduring West Coast cedar.

IT REMAINS TO BE learned how much of that hoped-for $10 million Centennial grant from the feds will go to Victoria. However, there's no shortage of notions as to how our share of the loot should be spent.

Some of them make sense, and I hope funds will be available to finance them. Certainly a portion of any grant should go toward resuscitating our badly-mauled and inadequately-housed public library.

While we can get along handsomely without a complex for the arts, especially if that particular plan envisions a new theatre, we could well sink a little something into parks.

For a start, I suggest, restore those diminished Beacon Hill flower beds.

Then, with an entirely new park, make at least partial amends for that shocking great gouge inflicted on Central Park for a status swimming pool.

It should be a good park, with plenty of room for children to play and old people to take their ease.

And, in line with a groundswell of public opinion that has been gathering strength since Victoria writer Gwen Cash set it rolling months ago, let it be called Warren Park.

W. H. (Herb) Warren, recently retired city parks administrator, richly deserves that honor.

As Victoria's chief official green thumb from 1930 until last spring, Herb Warren thought parks, taught parks, and when necessary, defended parks.

May our next one carry his name — no man deserves the tribute half so well,

IT'S BEEN A GREAT SUMmer. It still is. But the signs are out that it won't be with us all that much longer.

The fall fashions don't signify. They go on display while autumn is still distant.

But when kids begin to ask, "What is there to do?", and when the school supplies appear like magic in the stores, the end is well in sight.

Which reminds me that we have a vine-ripened Saltpring Sunrise tomato ready for plucking. It's the first of the season, though by no means the last, and I can taste it already!

Car Demolished in Crash

A man escaptd with only minor inuries this morning from an accident that demolished his car.

Donald Kilshaw, of 3927 Peters, had a close call at 2:30 a.m. when his late model car went out of control, failing to negotiate a cureve at Four Mile Hill in View Royal, Colwood RCMP said.

Kilshaw's car slammed into a power pole and was a write-off.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Many mothers have a lot of trouble with children especially when they go into tantrums of temper, hold their breaths and perhaps turn blue. These spells generally appear during the first few years of life and rarely before six months of age. They usually disappear after four years of age, and they rarey recur after six years. Fortunately, they don't seem to last long enough to injure the brain they are associated often with disturbances of behavior. The trouble tends to run in families.

The outlook for this type of problem is generally good; the associated unconsciousness and convulsions are very short and benign and require no immediate care. Many people are afraid the child may have had something like epilepsy, but the eminent Dr. Samuel Livingston, Johns Hopkins University, who is an expert on epilepsy, says that the parents do not have to fear epilepsy. Dr. Livingston says that the episodes usually last only a minute or so. He tells of having seen 242 patients with this trouble.

Dr. Livingston says that usually the giving of anti-epileptic drugs does not help. Probably, in most families, if the parents did not get into violent conflict with the child, they would not see these distressing episodes. Sometimes the child may use breath-holding as a means of dominating the family. Sometimes the parents make the mistake of getting too anxious and making too great a fuss over the child and his spells, thus enabling him to get away with anything he wants.

People write asking me what causes myositis, or soreness and pain in muscles. In Greek, myo means a muscle, and itis has come to mean inflammation; hence, myositis is an inflammation of muscles.

Often it is very hard to say why muslces are inflamed. My impression has been that such inflammation can often be related to an arthritis or inflammation of joints. That does not help much, because we physicians do not know as much about the causes of arthritis as we would like to know. In some cases, we know that germs can grow in muscles and we know that a virus can produce a terrible backache.

Then there are hereditary diseases of muscles that can greatly weaken children; also there is a nonhereditary myasthenia gravis (myo, muscle; A, lack of, sthenos, strength, and gravis, severe). Sometimes people have dermato-myositis, (derm meaning skin) with inflamation of the skin and some muscles.

There can be an acute myositis that may have to be treated quickly with cortisone-like drugs and antibiotics. Then there are chronic forms of myositis, and myositis that follows a severe blow due perhaps to an accident. Also there is a type of myosits in which hardening, bone-like changes appear in the muscles.

Some chronic forms of myositis can be treated by a physiotherapist, who will use massage, diathermy, and other physical or electric methods. A good specialist to see might be an expert rheumatologist who treats arthritis.

ACROBATIC THIEVES NABBED BY 'OWL EYE'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The case read like the scenario for an Alfred Hitchcock thriller: police with an electronic eye that peers into the night; a gang of acrobatic jewel thieves with a million-dollar string of successes, and a mad scramble for $240,000 worth of rings tossed out a window.

It began shortly before midnight Wednesday when a burglar alarm brought Sgt. Thomas Connolly of the police department's safe and loft squad and two other officers racing to the Botell Ring Co. on the 18th floor of a 20-storey building in mid-Manhattan.

Atop the building, they searched the darkness with the aid of an "owl eye," an electronic device developed for night fighting in Vietnam. It magnifies available light more than 100 times. They spotted a man hanging by a rope from the second floor window and raced back down the stairs.

Out of the same window, four other men were throwing cases of gold and diamond rings taken from a vault smashed by sledgehammers. One of the cases burst, spewing rings all over a courtyard.

Sidney Heller, president of Botell, said more than 2,000 rings worth $24,000 were recovered, some of them by police who spent more than an hour searching for them on their hands and knees in the courtyard.

Police arrested Raymond Smith, 36, of New York as he dangled from a rope over the courtyard. The others escaped.

Builders Deny Pollution

HOUSTON, B.C. (CP) — The ceremonies were to mark industrial expansion but a local organization put pollution on the bill Thursday as Premier W. A. C. Bennett arrived at this northern British Columbia community for the opening of the Bulkley Valley Forest Industries lumber complex.

Members of the Smithers branch of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control met the premier's entourage to tell officials that what has been lauded as the province's most modern and pollution-free mill is about to foul the Morice River.

The group said the mill—which plans a 700 - ton - a - day kraft pulp mill and a 450-ton-a-day newsprint mill in two years — will use one third of the river's flow and discharge its waste back into the river.

Resources Minister Ray Williston said company executive J. Martin Ritchie is one of the world's conservation leaders and that he and the company are doing "everything possible to ensure as pollution-free an operation as is possible."

WATER CLEANED

He said water from the river is recirculated and cleaned of any effluent.

The kiln-dried lumber mill opened Thursday is considered the world's largest and turns out 40 pieces of lumber a minute. Company president D. D. Currie said the $18 million, nine-acre mill uses every part of a tree.

Mr. Currie also said water for the mill comes from four wells and effluent is treated for twice as long as is required in a modern plant.

A 500-acre experimental garden is being established beside the mill in co-operation with the provincial agriculture department and the University of B.C. to test growing capacity in the region and the ability of industry and agriculture to "flourish together in harmony with the environment."

The complex will employ an estimated 1,500 persons by 1974 and a town of 10,000 is predicted for a year later.

FREE TRAVEL IRKS ELDERLY

COVENTRY, England (UPI) — The Coventry council has changed its mind about offering free bus travel to elderly pensioners and decided to keep the one penny special fare.

A council spokesman said it had received scores of angry letters from elderly residents insisting on paying their own way. He said a poll of old peoples' clubs confirmed they did not want free travel.

Robbery Victim Shot

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Constable, 21, of Vancouver, was in fair condition in hospital here this morning after being shot in the left side of his chest during a holdup in Stanley Park Thursday night.

Police said Constable's assailant apparently shot him with a pistol then fled with $50.

Investigation continues.

Sea Cadets Complete Tour of Dnty

By PAT DUFOUR

A group of 129 teen-agers left CFB Esquimalt today and the service base will never be quite the same.

Neither will the teen-agers.

These are the 129 Royal Canadian Sea Cadets from many parts of Canada who have spent the past six weeks under training, either taking a boatswain's or physical and recreation training course.

Their impact has caused high-ranking officers to phone and ask: "Who are those doubling around the parade ground.

When told they were cadets, there's been raised eyebrows and the admonition "Keep up the good work."

There's been plenty work.

Forty out of 42 days have been spent on duty with the cadets clamoring for more. Weekends were free — excpt for Sunday morning church services. For some of the teen-agers it was the first time they'd been inside a church.

What are their reactions now that the busy training schedule has come to an end?

They'd like to do it all over again.

So would their instructors.

It wasn't always so.

When leading seamen Dave Wesner and Philip Young were assigned to the summer course their reactions were: "Sea cadets — ugh!"

Now Young enthuses: "Sea cadets — great! I sure hope I can do it again."

He admits to feeling the force of a generation gap — but it's not the standard one that plagues most adults.

"It's their enthusiasm that gets you. They never stop working. It makes you feel every one of your 35 years."

B.C. ROUNDUP

Judge Issues Bench Warrant

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bench warrant was issued in British Columbia Supreme Court today when a man free on $10,000 bail did not appear to face extradition proceedings launched by the state of California.

Lawyer Jack McGivern, acting for U.S. authorities, said a bulletin has been issued for the arrest of Abraham Geha, 30, a hairdresser alleged to have imported more than 30 pounds of hashish into California from Lebanon.

Geha was arrested in California in 1968, then allegedly skipped $30,000 bail. He was arrested in Vancouver last October.

He had been under treatment here for a continuing illness while on bail.

Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm issued the bench warrant Thursday.

Alderman Quits

PEACHLAND (CP) — Alderman G. E. Fletcher said Thursday he quit his position on municipal council Wednesday night because he was subjected to personal abuse by a local resident.

Clerk Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Len Engler, 21, clerk of the City Centre Motel, was charged Thursday with theft of $700 from the motel last week. He told police then that two bandits held him up in the motel office.

One Beach Bad

KELOWNA (CP) — William Parchomcuk, secretary-manager of the Okanagan Basin Water Board, said Thursday only one beach on Lake Okanagan has been closed this year because of water pollution and other beaches are in "good shape."

Reunion Slated

KELOWNA (CP) — More than 40 officers and men who served on the HMCS Monnow during the Second World War will be here this weekend for the first reunion of the ship's company since the war ended.

Bylaw Quashed

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A city bylaw allowing a children's Foundation boarding house in a residential area was quashed in Supreme Court Thursday on grounds that notice of public hearing on the bylaw did not give proper notice of intention as provided under the Muncipal Act. The house was to have been used as a halfway house to integrate disturbed children into the community.

COMMON ENERGY POLICY URGED

MONTREAL — Canada and the United States should form a common policy on continental energy resources, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel told a Montreal news conference here Thursday.

He was commenting on Canadian guidelines for oil development in the north announced in Ottawa Thursday. See story on Page 2.

CANADA POLICY

Gas Imports Face Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene announced today new regulations requiring importers of motor gasoline for use anywhere in Canada to get licences from the national energy board — a step to reinforce the government's national oil policy.

The announcement follows months of controversy over the market effects of cheaper imported oil and gasoline on the Alberta-produced oil refined in Eastern Canada by the major oil companies.

NOW IN EFFECT

Under the new regulations which went into effect Thursday, the national energy board will have to judge whether certain applications to import motor gasoline are consistent with the development of Canada's own oil resources.

On May 7, the national energy board imposed a ban on sales of imported gasoline west of the Ottawa Valley but this ban was ruled unconstitutional by the Exchequer Court earlier this month.

The court decision allowed Cal Oil Inc. of Montreal to import gasoline, apparently from Spain.

Greene today said the objectives of the national oil policy are still valid. The government was trying a new approach.

ALSO VENEZUELA

The board is also trying to stop the flow of Montreal-refined gasoline from Venezuela west of the Ottawa Valley dividing line.

The Exchequer Court decision by Mr. Justice W. R. Jackett, the court's president, did not affect the voluntary arrangement keeping gasoline and other products refined in Montreal from Venezuelan imported crude out of the region west of the Ottawa area.

That agreement was made in 1961 at the time the national oil policy was announced. However, there is some movement of gasoline into Eastern Ontario.

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and other companies have said they are reducing production at Ontario refineries using Alberta crude because of stiffer competition from lower-price and Montreal-refined gasoline.

Schools Squeeze To Continue

QUESNEL (CP) — Education Minister Donald Brothers said Thursday the provincial government will continue for another year to restrict school construction to essentials.

"Money markets are still as tight as ever, if not tighter," he said. "Interest rates have not come down."

He said he has given this message to school board officials: "We don't want palaces built. We want functional schools — not cheap schools, but effective, efficient, well-built schools."

He also said he is trying to persuade school boards to look at the idea of consolidating school districts to reduce staff.

"We are being overgoverned in B.C. We have too many officials, too many secretary-treasurers, too many superintendents."

TWO-YEAR CONTRACT

****

Carpenters Sign

Crucial Break In Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 9,000-member carpenters union and the Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for 600 British Columbia building contractors, today announced signing of a new two-year contract.

A joint statement by the union and the CLRA said the agreement adopted proposals made two weeks ago by deputy labor minister William Sands, who acted as mediator.

The new contract, running to March 31, 1972, provides an increase of $1.38 an hour in wages and fringe benefits, spread over the two years.

WORK HALTED

The agreement already approved by secret ballot of union members and CLRA member-organizations — is seen as crucial in the B.C. dispute, which saw work almost completely stopped through the province for three months.

The former base rate for carpenters — including fringes —was $5.03 an hour. This increases to $6.41 in the final stage of the two-year agreement.

The carpenters will get an immediate increase of 45 cents, retroactive to June 1. Additional increases during the contract will be 37 cents Oct. 1, 36 cents April 1, 1971, and 20 cents Oct. 1, 1971.

The carpenters union was the largest of 10 locked out by the contractors' association last spring. A total of 25,000 construction workers were locked out or on strike during the three-month stoppage that ended July 27.

INTERVENTION

Work was resumed after the provincial government invoked compulsory arbitration sections of the B.C. Mediation Commission Act.

Most of the unions indicated they would not return, but after personal intervention by Premier Bennett and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, the two sides agreed to go back to work and submit their disputes to mediation by Deputy Labor Minister Sands.

Since then, six unions have voted to reject Sands's proposals for settlement.

IT'S ONLY A PAPER WAR but up until the Manitoba legislature was prorogued Thursday after the longest session in its history, these two combatants, NDP labor minister A. R. OTTAWA (CP) — The sale of all foods containing cyclamates will be banned by Sept. 1, the health department said today.

Measles Fight Gets $25,000

The Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. announced today it is donating $25,000 to a province-wide attack on German measles.

It's the latest development in a wave of support from a variety of sources which will stretch the provincial government's limited innoculation program.

Foundation secretary Allen Cowen of Vancouver announced the contribution at a press conference in Saanich municipal hall this morning.

He said he hopes the Kinsmen move will spur other foundations to boost the campaign the provincial government has launched on a budget of $88,000.

COUNCILS DONATE

Victoria and Saanich councils have decided to contribute $5,000 each, enough to supply vaccine for the preschoolers in each municipality. Central and North Saanich councils are participating and Esquimalt and Oak Bay councils are expected to consider the subject at their meetings.

The province's campaign will be aimed at elementary school children on a priority basis.

The campaign, and the push for funds, stems from two developments. For the first time there is a vaccine which appears to deliver long-term immunity from German measles or rubella.

Mid-East Ceasefire Deteriorates As Israeli Jets Pound Jordan

JERUSALEM (CP)— Israeli air force planes struck at Jordanian army positions today, the military command said, in further deterioration of the Middle East ceasefire.

The command said the raid was launched against Jordanian army strongholds which have given assistance to Palestinian guerrillas in attacks against Israeli frontier settlements.

A spokesman had announced earlier that Israeli air force jets crossed the border today and bombed and strafed Arab guerrilla targets inside Jordan for the second straight day.

The Tel Aviv spokesman said those raids were in response to mortar attacks on two Jewish settlements.

The planes all returned safely after hitting objectives adjacent to Israel's Beisan Valley, he said. Beisan Valley settlements of Maoz Haim and Yardena came under mortar fire Thursday night, but no damage was reported.

This was the second Israeli air strike inside Jordan since the Middle East ceasefire went into effect a week ago. The guerrilla organizations have disowned the truce initiated by the United States as a preliminary to peace talks.

ANTI-POLLUTION DRIVE THREATENS US—CFI

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Council of the Forest Industries of British Columbia said Thursday the future of the industry would be threatened by the enforcement of strict anti-pollution measures.

A brief, presented by council president Gordon Draeseke to a public hearing of the pollution control branch, said any control measures adopted by the provincial government must be feasible for the forest industry to implement.

The brief said that standards of pollution control should be set for each individual forest operation instead of for the industry generally.

Pulp Workers Call Walkout

A strike that would close down eight more B.C. pulp mills has been set for midnight Wednesday.

Pat O'Neal, spokesman for the Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, said in Prince George the strike would begin when the term of provincial mediator Gus Leonidas expires.

Involved are 5,700 members of the Brotherhood and more than 1,200 members of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers union.

The men are employed at MacMillan Bloedel plants at Powell River and Port Alberni; Crown Zellerbach mills at Elk Falls and Ocean Falls; Rayonier mills at Port Alice and Port Mellon on Howe Sound; Northwood Pulp in Prince George; and Kamloops Pulp and Paper.

Eight other pulp mills have been shut down since July 24 as a result of a strike by 4,200 members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. The mills are at Crofton, Harmac, Gold River, Woodfibre, Prince George (2), Castlegar and Skookumchuk.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson has reminded construction workers that any walkouts they may have in mind would be illegal.

BUT SHALLOW WATER SITE URGED BY COURT

Florida Fails to Halt Nerve Gas Dumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal district judge refused today to forbid the sea-bottom burial of deadly nerve gas off the Florida coast.

But Judge June L. Green coupled her denial of a temporary restraining order with an "urgent request" that the United States defence department designate a different site for the dumping.

She said she had "serious misgivings" about the selected site. Sinking of a ship carrying the gas at a depth of 16,000 feet, she said, posed the danger of a sudden and simultaneous crushing of all of the concrete-encased gas containers.

Judge Green also noted testimony and affidavits submitted to her that this is the first time the U.S. Army had planned to dispose of gas at such a great depth.

She also noted that two years ago the army disposed of gas in 7,000 feet of water off the New Jersey coast and that later checks by navy scientists had revealed no detectable harm to marine life or anything.

The judge's action came on a complaint by the Environmental Defence Fund, a New York-based citizens' group, and joined by Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida.

WEATHER A PROBLEM

The weather, meanwhile, posed a further challenge to the army's plans to dump the 2,675 tons of gas in the Atlantic off Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The weather bureau in Miami reported a dangerous tropical depression with winds of 60 miles an hour approaching the Bahamas and Florida.

Although there were no present forecasts of a possible hurricane in the area, Dr. Robert H. Simpson, head of the National Hurricane Centre in Miami, said it was possible a hurricane "could come with great suddenness."

Lawyers for the fund said they would appeal Judge Green's decision immediately to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

There was no immediate indication, moreover, about the reaction of the defence department and the army to the judge's request that they seek another disposal site "at a reasonable distance" from Sunny Point, N.C., the port of embarkation.

PLANS CONTINUE

At Sunny Point, where the loading of the 418 steel- and concrete-encased nerve gas rockets was proceeding, navy Capt. A. G. Hamilton, commander of the sea phase of the operation, said he was watching the tropical depression carefully and would not move out of port if it became a threat to the burial area.

Hamilton said the tugs would not begin pulling the ship to sea until they had a 96-hour forecast of good weather. He said the operation would remain in port until such a forecast was made.

If the weather is favorable, Hamilton said he hopes to get the operation under way late Saturday. However, the loading of the caskets was running slightly behind schedule and might not be completed until Sunday, he said.

NO DANGER, SAYS U.K.

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain announced today that American plans to dump nerve gas off the Florida coast will cause no appreciable harmful effect aside from localized damage to marine life.

The foreign office released the conclusions of a report of a team of British experts which discussed the dumping problem with U.S. officials

Involved are 5,700 members of the Brotherhood and more than 1,200 members of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers union.

The men are employed at MacMillan Bloedel plants at Powell River and Port Alberni; Crown Zellerbach mills at Elk Falls and Ocean Falls; Rayonier mills at Port Alice and Port Mellon on Howe Sound; Northwood Pulp in Prince George; and Kamloops Pulp and Paper.

Eight other pulp mills have been shut down since July 24 as a result of a strike by 4,200 members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. The mills are at Crofton, Harmac, Gold River, Woodfibre, Prince George (2), Castlegar and Skookumchuk.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson has reminded construction workers that any walkouts they may have in mind would be illegal.

Crucial Break In Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 9,000-member carpenters union and the Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for 600 British Columbia building contractors, today announced signing of a new two-year contract.

A joint statement by the union and the CLRA said the agreement adopted proposals made two weeks ago by deputy labor minister William Sands, who acted as mediator.

The new contract, running to March 31, 1972, provides an increase of $1.38 an hour in wages and fringe benefits, spread over the two years.

WORK HALTED

The agreement already approved by secret ballot of union members and CLRA member-organizations — is seen as crucial in the B.C. dispute, which saw work almost completely stopped through the province for three months.

The former base rate for carpenters — including fringes —was $5.03 an hour. This increases to $6.41 in the final stage of the two-year agreement.

The carpenters will get an immediate increase of 45 cents, retroactive to June 1. Additional increases during the contract will be 37 cents Oct. 1, 36 cents April 1, 1971, and 20 cents Oct. 1, 1971.

The carpenters union was the largest of 10 locked out by the contractors' association last spring. A total of 25,000 construction workers were locked out or on strike during the three-month stoppage that ended July 27.

INTERVENTION

Work was resumed after the provincial government invoked compulsory arbitration sections of the B.C. Mediation Commission Act.

Most of the unions indicated they would not return, but after personal intervention by Premier Bennett and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, the two sides agreed to go back to work and submit their disputes to mediation by Deputy Labor Minister Sands.

Since then, six unions have voted to reject Sands's proposals for settlement.

BUT SHALLOW WATER SITE URGED BY COURT

Florida Fails to Halt Nerve Gas Dumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal district judge refused today to forbid the sea-bottom burial of deadly nerve gas off the Florida coast.

But Judge June L. Green coupled her denial of a temporary restraining order with an "urgent request" that the United States defence department designate a different site for the dumping.

She said she had "serious misgivings" about the selected site. Sinking of a ship carrying the gas at a depth of 16,000 feet, she said, posed the danger of a sudden and simultaneous crushing of all of the concrete-encased gas containers.

Judge Green also noted testimony and affidavits submitted to her that this is the first time the U.S. Army had planned to dispose of gas at such a great depth.

She also noted that two years ago the army disposed of gas in 7,000 feet of water off the New Jersey coast and that later checks by navy scientists had revealed no detectable harm to marine life or anything.

The judge's action came on a complaint by the Environmental Defence Fund, a New York-based citizens' group, and joined by Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida.

WEATHER A PROBLEM

The weather, meanwhile, posed a further challenge to the army's plans to dump the 2,675 tons of gas in the Atlantic off Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The weather bureau in Miami reported a dangerous tropical depression with winds of 60 miles an hour approaching the Bahamas and Florida.

Although there were no present forecasts of a possible hurricane in the area, Dr. Robert H. Simpson, head of the National Hurricane Centre in Miami, said it was possible a hurricane "could come with great suddenness."

Lawyers for the fund said they would appeal Judge Green's decision immediately to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

There was no immediate indication, moreover, about the reaction of the defence department and the army to the judge's request that they seek another disposal site "at a reasonable distance" from Sunny Point, N.C., the port of embarkation.

PLANS CONTINUE

At Sunny Point, where the loading of the 418 steel- and concrete-encased nerve gas rockets was proceeding, navy Capt. A. G. Hamilton, commander of the sea phase of the operation, said he was watching the tropical depression carefully and would not move out of port if it became a threat to the burial area.

Hamilton said the tugs would not begin pulling the ship to sea until they had a 96-hour forecast of good weather. He said the operation would remain in port until such a forecast was made.

If the weather is favorable, Hamilton said he hopes to get the operation under way late Saturday. However, the loading of the caskets was running slightly behind schedule and might not be completed until Sunday, he said.

NO DANGER, SAYS U.K.

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain announced today that American plans to dump nerve gas off the Florida coast will cause no appreciable harmful effect aside from localized damage to marine life.

The foreign office released the conclusions of a report of a team of British experts which discussed the dumping problem with U.S. officials
